Legislators Preparing To 'Summer' In Capital

Leaders Indicate Congress Session To Mid-August, Perhaps Labor Day

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congressional leaders are resigned to an overtime session of Congress lasting at least until mid-August and possibly Labor Day.

This was disclosed by a top Senate source as Administration Democrats prepared to huddle with GOP helmsmen on the session-end work load.

The log jam is confined almost entirely to the Senate, where the pile of unfinished business is tall enough to make a normal session of Congress step lively.

House Close to Schedule

The House is pretty much up to schedule, could adjourn by July 30 with ease. In fact, the House is taking what amounts to another vacation over this Memorial Day week. Though it meets today and again Wednesday, "no major business" is the order of the week.

The Senate, too, will loaf through Wednesday, meeting in token session today, and recessing over Tuesday.

On Wednesday, both Houses will convene in what amounts to an informal joint session of Congress in the Library of Congress auditorium, to hear Secretary of State Acheson report on his Atlantic Pact talks in Europe.

Then the Senate will go to work on one of the toughest schedules ever faced in an election year.

Optimistically, Senate leaders have fixed an August 12 "target date" for coming out of it but they privately tell their House colleagues it looks more like September 4.

Basing Point Roadblock

One of the higher roadblocks slowing Senate action is the pending controversial conference report on the basing point (freight absorption) pricing bill.

Leaders hoped to pass that by Friday but now concede debate may go into another week. Action on a less controversial item—Commodity Credit Corporation funds—may round out the week of June 4. Social Security expansion, the next item on the agenda, may polish off the month.

Even then the Senate won't begin to see the light. The House-passed omnibus money bill hasn't even cleared the Senate Appropriations Committee, much less reached the Senate floor. When it does, the Senate, like the House, may spend weeks on it, with more

. . . run-off between them is likely

Raleigh, N. C., May 28 (U.P.)—Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.), seeking to win on his own the Senate seat to which he was named two years ago, probably will face a runoff primary June 24 against Willis Smith, a conservative corporation lawyer, almost complete returns showed today.

Returns from 1918 of the State's 1990 precincts gave Graham 299,177 votes to 248,827 for Smith. Former Senator Robert Reynolds polled 57,888 and Olla Ray Boyd 6124.

GE Vote Plea Of Tobin Puts NLRB on Spot

IUE Support Appeal Raises 'Government Interference' Issue

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

An unprecedented action by Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin has put the Administration, the National Labor Relations Board and himself on the spot.

Tobin last week publicly urged General Electric employes to vote for the CIO's International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE) as their bargaining agent, and to vote against the left-wing United Electrical Workers (UE), which had been ousted from the CIO for pro-Communist policies.

On Thursday the NLRB conducted elections in 57 plants for 95,000 General Electric employes to determine which of the bitterly rival unions was to represent the majority of workers in the industry's largest corporation.

Formal Protest Prepared

The right-wing IUE won control of 54,000 employes, the left-wing UE, 37,000 employes. The largest GE plant, at Lynn, Mass., with 17,000 employes, voted to join the right-wing IUE, 6098 to 5314.

Yesterday, the left-wing UE was preparing to make a formal protest to the NLRB over the Lynn election, and ask that the ballots be thrown out and another election held. The UE says there were a number of things wrong in the conduct of the Lynn election, particularly Secretary of Labor Tobin's appeal on behalf of the CIO.

On May 21, Tobin participated in a right-wing IUE rally of 15,000 General Electric employes in Lynn, along with CIO President Philip Murray, and CIO Secretary-Treasurer Jim Carey, who heads the IUE.

The Labor Secretary told the audience in the city hall auditorium that this was no local fight "but a question of whether a vital industry will be in the hands of Americans, or friends of Soviet Russia."

Sees "Americanism" Issue

In Boston yesterday, Secretary of Labor Tobin told The Washington Post that so far as he was concerned the issue was not of trade unionism but of "basic Americanism." He said he had spoken extemporaneously at the rally, and appeared at the invitation of friends.

The invitation, it was learned, came from Fred Kelley, business agent and leader of the Lynn local. Kelley was defeated for president of the U. E. by Albert

Veteran Leaves Wife At D. C. Hospital With Serious Head Wound

By Philip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

A 23-year-old Camp Springs, Md., mother was in critical condition last night at Providence Hospital with a bullet wound in her throat and head.

Her 28-year-old husband, Homer H. Whitlock, a coppersmith, was in the Prince Georges County jail at Upper Marlboro, Md., held in lieu of $10,000 bond on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

According to Detective John W. Siddall, the wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Whitlock, was brought to Providence Hospital about 2 a. m. yesterday with a bullet wound in her throat. She was brought by the husband, who then left, police said.

Detective Siddall and Policemen Lawrence Riddlebarger and Ralph Bond, all of the Upper Marlboro station, went to the Whitlock home, 5360 Edgewood dr., Camp Springs, Md., and found no one home. They could see the .25 automatic revolver lying on the bed beside a pool of blood, so they broke into the house through a window.

The policemen searched the home but could find no one at home. Detective Siddall and Policeman Riddlebarger started back to Washington to question Mrs. Whitlock, when Policeman Bond, who had been left in a patrol car near the house, radioed that the husband had returned.

The man went into the house and grabbed up clothing and an alarm clock and started off, police

Veteran Waving Pistol Terrorizes 25 on Airliner

Fresno, Calif., May 28 (U.P.).—A fear-crazed 26-year-old war veteran terrorized 25 persons aboard a California Central Airlines plane for 35 minutes today, brandishing a loaded pistol and screaming he was being "gassed."

He was arrested when the pilot made an emergency landing here on a flight from Los Angeles to San Francisco. The plane carried 23 passengers and a crew of 3.

John O'Reilly, a Los Angeles aircraft worker, waved a loaded .25-caliber automatic, screaming orders at the passengers, and smashed two windows.

O'Reilly's 8-month-old baby and his German wife were among the passengers.

U. S. Trains Personnel of Pact Allies

1300 From Europe To Be in Service Schools by Late June; More Due Later

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America once again is becoming the training ground as well as the arsenal of democracy.

Military men of the Atlantic Pact nations have been quietly arriving by ship and plane in recent weeks to enroll in Army, Navy and Air Force schools throughout the country. It is an important but almost entirely unpublicized part of the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

Hundreds of officers and men already are here and the Department of Defense disclosed yesterday that by late June about 1300 such visitors from western Europe will be undergoing instruction at military schools in this country.

Program to Be Expanded

And, a Pentagon spokesman told The Washington Post the training program is to be greatly expanded. Within a year, it was said, no less than 3000 European officers and enlisted technicians will be attending military schools in the United States.

"This is a vital part of the assistance program and one which pays dividends far beyond the modest cost involved," said a top Pentagon official. "For unless our western European friends know how to use the weapons we are transferring to them under MDAP the whole program will fail."

Almost every one of the armed forces schools will receive its quota of students. The majority will go to such places as the Infantry School, Fort Bennning, Ga.; the Army Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va.; the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.; Air Force schools in the Southwest and Navy technical schools along the East Coast.

95 From Turkey

Not all the students will be from western Europe. Ninety-five Turkish naval officers and men are en route here on two American destroyers. They will take courses at the New London, Conn., Submarine School, preparatory to manning the submarine rescue vessel USS Bluebird, being transferred to Turkey.

Crews for two destroyer escorts officially turned over to Holland Saturday have been under instruction at the Boston Naval Shipyard in recent weeks.

Forty French sailors are taking similar courses at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, and 100 French pilots, navigators and technicians are at flight schools at San Antonio and Houston, Tex., and Pensacola, Fla.

Brig. Gen. Rene Leon Pierre DuPerron, commandant of the Antiaircraft Firing School at Nimes, France, has been taking a special two weeks course at the United States Army's Antiaircraft and Guided Missile Center, Fort Bliss, Tex. this month.

Absorbed Into Courses

Officials said the scope of the program largely is limited by the availability of qualified European military personnel. Because western Europe's armed forces are undergoing expansion and modernization under the rearmament program, officers and noncoms can be spared only in limited numbers.

Lie Is Hurled At McCarthy By State Dept.

Language Distortion In Rochester Attack On Jessup Is Charged

By the United Press

The State Department again hurled the lie at Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday for his charge that Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup once was affiliated with six Communist-front organizations.

It also denied anew his allegation that Professor Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins University is "the architect of our Far Eastern policy."

The department issued an "analysis of some of the factual inaccuracies" in a speech McCarthy delivered at Rochester, N. Y., last Thursday to the national convention of the Catholic Press Association of the United States.

As in previous analyses of McCarthy's claims, it accused him of lifting words and phrases from the context of letters and speeches and using them to suit his own purpose to support his charges the department is overrun by Reds.

It recalled that McCarthy accused Jessup of being affiliated with six Communist-front groups. It said two of the organizations definitely were not Red, and that Jessup was not a member of two others.

As for the fifth and sixth, it said Jessup signed a "call" that resulted in the formation of one but had no further connection with it, and that he was among the sponsors of two dinners given by the other group. This group was known as the American-Russian Institute. Jessup was not a sponsor of the institute, however.

The department then accused McCarthy of "distorting" a remark by Secretary of State Dean Acheson in an hour-long address to the National Press Club here on January 12.

McCarthy had said Acheson referred to the Communist victory in China as the "dawning of a new day." The department countered yesterday that Acheson, after re-

In Loyalty Cases

Malone Urges 'Cleanup' at Commerce

By the United Press

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) yesterday demanded a "good old-fashioned housecleaning" in the Commerce Department in connection with the loyalty cases of William W. Remington and Michael Lee.

He asserted that Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer's request for the resignation of the two officials, both centers of long and bitter controversies in Congress, shows the need for an investigation of everyone connected with their cases.

"This should prove they're all in it together," Malone added.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), who heads the Senate Commerce subcommittee looking into the Manchurian-born Lee's case, promptly disagreed. He said that while the committee will have the final say, he would favor "sitting tight until we see what happens."

Remington, an economist in the Office of International Trade, and Lee, head of the office's Far Eastern branch, both refused to resign and said they will fight dismissal. Sawyer asked for their resignations Saturday after he met behind closed doors with the full Commerce Committee.

The committee warned him either to fire Lee or face a full-scale investigation of his department.

Attorney Takes Miss Coplon as Bride in New York

New York, May 28 (AP).—Judith Coplon, former Government girl twice convicted of spying for Russia, was married today to attorney Albert H. Socolov.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rebecca Coplon, in Brooklyn.

The bride and bridegroom, both 29, were married by Rabbi Max Felshin, pastor of the Radio City Synagogue in Manhattan.

"We hope to live a happy, normal life," Socolov said. "We are very much in love and confident of the future."

Socolov is associated with a law firm that defended Miss Coplon in her New York City trial. She faces prison sentences totaling 25 years.

They said they intended to spend tonight at a New York City hotel and leave Monday by automobile for an upstate honeymoon. They said they expect to be gone a week or 10 days.

The newlyweds said they have rented a three-room apartment in Brooklyn and that it already is partly furnished.

Food Output Shrinking as World Grows

FAO Director Says Hunger Lies Behind Trouble in Far East

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Although the world population has increased 200 million in 10 years—more than the entire population of the United States, Canada and Mexico—the world is raising 3 percent less food than in 1940.

Director General Norris E. Dodd of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, who has just returned from five months' visiting the world's backward areas, says lack of food and uncertainty as to the future are "back of all the trouble in the Far East."

While people are going to bed hungry every night, vast areas of the world, which could be producing huge quantities of food, are unused, Dodd said. Other areas are suffering from expensive food surpluses.

Leaving Washington last January, Dodd virtually blanketed South America, visited Africa, and then traveled through the Middle East from Afghanistan to India, Pakistan, Burma and Siam.

"I flew over an area of black loam in Central Africa that is even larger than our great Midwest black loam country," said Dodd, a native Iowan, who has spent practically all his 70 years farming in Iowa, the Dakotas and Oregon. "It's 1100 miles from the coast. Nobody lives there. The black soil, 6 to 8 feet deep, outrivals Iowa in its depth and its area. There is no richer land in the world."

The resources of Africa, Dodd said, are almost limitless.

Dodd brought word that the FAO will hold a business conference in Washington in November, preparatory to moving to Rome in March.

Before that 60-nation conference, Dodd expects Argentina to become a member. Argentina, which Dodd also visited, was the only large grain exporter that remained out of the organization with the exception of Russia.

He also reported that FAO has hopes of reaching an agreement with China so that some effort soon can be made to aid in the famine in North China.

The disruptions due to the war in the economy of the world are still serious in Europe, he said, but far worse in the Far East. In prewar days the Philippines, Burma, Siam and neighboring states sent their raw materials to Japan, and bought finished goods from the Japanese. This trade hasn't been restored. China is shut off.

In addition, the domestic economy of many of the countries

Berlin Rally Is Peaceful Parade by Half Million

Only One Isolated Incident of Violence Reported; Marchers Plod Through Rain

Berlin, May 28 (AP).—A half million or more disciplined East German youths, their blue uniforms sodden from day-long downpours, chanted and marched today in Berlin's biggest Communist show since the war.

The vastly prepared Whitsuntide rally turned out to be a peaceful parade, not a putsch.

By 8 p. m. the only incident reported involved beating of a West Berlin news vendor by Communist youth on a trolley car at the American and Soviet sector border. A West Berlin policeman arrested the motorman who had denounced the vendor to the youths.

Memories of Hitler

The parade mocked and caricatured the West, eulogized Stalin and the Soviet, and carried high the drumbeats of hate—not unlike another day when Hitler's massed legions strode the same historic thoroughfare: Unter den Linden.

The biggest hand was saved for 10,000 grim-faced jackbooted troopers of the East German People's Police, which the West calls an army. The deeply tanned, drilled mass swept down Unter den Linden and past reviewing stands in the Lustgarten in perfect military formation. In dark blue uniforms and red ties, they carried regular field kits but no arms.

Soaked to the skin and shivering from the frequent showers, many sought refuge in nearby doorways and bomb ruins as Stalinist oratory wore on at the Lustgarten, but were herded back to their formations by East German police.

Police Stand Ready

Along a nervous East-West dividing line that threads past Brandenburg Gate and through Postdamer Platz, East German police laid out fire hoses and faced an equally alert West German police force.

Thirteen thousand West German police, equipped with stores of tear gas and water-spouting trucks and backed by 8000 riot-trained Allied troops, had taken extreme precautions in view of the threats of Free German Youth leaders months ago that they would "storm Berlin."

If the threats were serious the precautions bore fruit.

The showdown over Berlin was postponed for a later day.

About all that was proved today was that the West would not be moved out of Berlin by threats of

Dean Sees Some Atomic Data Ready for Public

Columbus, Ohio, May 28 (AP).—The time may be ripe to release some now-secret atomic energy information, Gordon Dean, member of the Atomic Energy Commission, said here today.

Dean spoke before an atomic energy conference of the Blue Pencil Club of Ohio, an organization of newspaper editors.

He said:

"The Russian atomic explosion, taken together with several other events, suggests that in the interest of national security it may be wise to declassify rather broadly certain scientific and technical information which the Russians must have possessed in order to achieve an explosion."

But information of great value to a potential enemy still should remain classified, he added.

$10,500,000 at Stake

Fairfax to Vote Wednesday On School Financing Issue

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

The voters of Fairfax County will decide Wednesday whether they will borrow 10½ million dollars to build new schools and improve existing ones.

All regular polling places in the county will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., daylight time, for this special yes-or-no referendum on the bond issue.

Also on the ballot will be a referendum on a proposed $980,000 bond issue to improve the county courthouse and build a new jail.

The 10½-million-dollar school bond issue would be part of a 12-million-dollar program that school officials insist is necessary to meet minimum needs in the badly congested system by the 1950-51 school year. It calls for construction of 11 new schools and alterations or additions to virtually all of the other 40 schools in the system.

Those eligible to vote in the referendum, according to Circuit Court Clerk Thomas P. Chapman, jr., are:

1. Voters who were qualified to vote in the general election last November.

2. Persons whose poll tax was paid on or before December 13, 1949, and who are properly registered.

3. Those who became 21 on or after January 1, 1949. These persons are not subject to the poll tax as yet but must be properly registered.

School officials feel they can obtain the balance of the 12 million dollars through outright grants or loans from the State Literary Fund if the bond issue is approved.

Despite the enormous size of the proposed expenditure, proponents of the building program have expressed belief it can be undertaken without increasing the present school levy of $2.65 on each $100 valuation. They base their estimates on an anticipated increase in assessments which is expected to increase the value of taxable properties by as much as 10 million dollars in the coming tax year.

With the Board of Education itself solidly in back of the bond issue, it has gained widespread support throughout the county. The organization most active in drumming up support for the proposal has been the Fairfax School Emergency Committee, headed by W. Alvord Sherman. Its efforts have won the indorsement of the County Federation of Citizens Associations, Parent-Teachers' organizations and numerous other groups throughout the county.

Silver Spring Cyclist Killed; Five Hurt In Bethesda Crash

James S. Powell, 18, was killed instantly at 10:45 last night when his bicycle was in collision with an automobile going in the same direction on Colesville pike at Notley rd. in Silver Spring, Md.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said the youth apparently died of a brain concussion. He said he would issue a certificate of accidental death. Powell lived on Avenel st., Silver Spring.

Driver of the car, according to police, was Leonard R. Brigham, 20, of Colesville, Md. He reported there was no light or reflector on Powell's bicycle; that he was blinded by oncoming headlights, and did not see the boy.

Brigham was held on a technical charge of manslaughter by Montgomery County Police.

Five persons were injured earlier in the evening when two cars collided on Route 240 in Bethesda, Md. State police said a car driven by Stephen L. Best, 17, of 2800 Ontario pl. nw., ran off the rain-slippery road onto a shoulder and swerved into the second car as Best tried to put his vehicle back on the road.

Injured were Neil Crichton, 18, of 3565 Brandywine st. nw., in critical condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital with a cerebral concussion; Norman Rudolph, 19, of 3553 Brandywine st. nw., in serious condition at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, with a possible cerebral

Interstate Gaming-Crime Link Is Established, Sen. Hunt Says

By the United Press

Senate crime investigators yesterday revealed that their surprise inquiry in Miami established a "definite link" between certain Florida gamblers and underworld characters in other States.

The statement was made to the United Press by Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), member of the special crime investigating committee that made an unheralded trip to the Southern winter playground this weekend.

"We accomplished our aim of establishing that there is a definite interstate aspect to gambling operations," Hunt asserted.

He also disclosed that the Miami trip probably is only the first of a series of unannounced visits to other big cities where gambling and allied crime flourishes.

"I think they'll have to be that way" he said. "There may be some public hearings later, but I've never believed you accomplished very much by conducting a four-ring circus."

The committee was set up to investigate Nation-wide crime syndicates and their "corruptive influence" on local politics. It is expected to recommend methods for curbing such activities.

The secret hearing was the first of several on-the-spot investigations of local crime conditions planned by committee chairman

Tax Study Cautions Against Excise Cuts

A tax study published by the Brookings Institution yesterday opposed any sharp reduction in excise taxes because of the "large revenues" needed by the Government.

But it did urge "careful integration" of corporate and personal income taxes on grounds that present levies, especially those of business enterprises, "are already having adverse effects on (business) incentives."

It said the size of the tax rate, now 38 percent for incomes of $50,000 or more, has a great influence over the plant expansion plans of businessmen.

The study, conducted by Lewis H. Kimmel, was financed by a grant from the Galk Foundation, Pittsburgh. It was based mainly on questionnaires sent to manufacturers and retailers.

The House Ways and Means Committee now is working on a bill to revise the excise tax structure. It already has voted a $1,100,000,000 reduction in excise levies and indications are that much of the loss in Federal revenue will not be made up elsewhere.

President Truman recommended a revision of excises but he demanded that any cuts be made up by increasing corporate levies and plugging "loopholes" in the personal income laws. The committee's bill thus far would make few changes in corporate taxes.

The Kimmel study recommended some changes in the excise system but said the "view that the role of sales and excise taxes should be sharply reduced is untenable."

"Because of the large revenue requirements of the Government, we cannot afford to dispense with a large portion of the revenues now obtained from any major tax source," it said. "Proposals to replace most sales and certain other taxes with higher income taxes are not well founded."

Three-fifths of the manufacturers surveyed reported that present corporate income taxes had a direct effect on their prices. Most said taxes would not have this effect if they were one-fourth to one-third lower.

About 55 percent said their plans for plant expansion were influenced by the corporate tax rate, while 95 percent said "the incentive to work and save has been affected by high personal income tax rates."

The study said "one fundamental fiscal goal" should be kept in mind in setting up a tax structure —"keep the tax burden well within the limits of taxable capacity."

"The balanced tax system of the future will give due consideration to the citizen in his several roles of producer, consumer and investor," it said. "It will also recognize that the great majority of the people are investors, either directly or indirectly."

The study reached these general conclusions:

1. Establishment of new businesses is not greatly affected by taxes. It said the desire to "be one's own boss" is an important element in most decisions to set up new concerns.

2. Decisions relating to business expansion are influenced by taxes, especially income taxes.

3. Small and moderate-size firms hoping to expand from earnings are seriously affected by the corporate income tax. It said a lot of these companies have no outside sources of capital.

4. The volume of money savings available for investment is profoundly influenced by personal income taxes. The study said stockholders are less willing, or less able, than in prewar years to increase their "commitments" to their companies.

5. Work incentives of wage earners are not materially influenced by taxes. But the study said that sometimes overtime work "is less desirable than when taxes were lower."

6. Industrial incentives are not much affected by property taxes. "The incentive to produce is affected slightly, it at all."

7. Capital expansion and level of business operations have not been appreciably affected by payroll taxes at recent rates. But the study said the "enormous" expansion of social security benefits, now being considered by Congress, would mean a large "draft" on general revenues and "might become so large as to limit seriously the possibility of effective reform."

CAP Bringing 70 Visitors

The Civil Air Patrol will bring 70 youngsters from Europe and Canada to this country for a three-week visit this summer in exchange for 70 American youths to be sent to both places.

Details of the exchange program were related to Wing Commanders of CAP at their annual conference in Washington last week by Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, national board chairman, who recently returned from a trip to Europe to complete arrangements.

Describing the program as a "chance of a lifetime" to help promote international understanding, General Spaatz said it has been expanded this year to include cadets from Portugal and Italy, as well as from England, France, Switzerland and Canada. All of them will be brought to Washington for a few days of sightseeing after starting the trip August 1, he said.

Those from Canada will tour the Western United States, including Denver, the Rocky Mountain region and Los Angeles. The British group will take in Eastern United States, including Detroit, Selfridge Air Force Base, Mich., and Chanute Air Force Base in Illinois.

The French group will visit the University of Illinois, the Swiss group the University of Texas, the Portuguese group Orlando, Fla., and the Italian group New York City. All will meet together August 16 at the ranch of Col. D. Harold Byrd, at Dallas, Tex., for an international party.

The American group will tour western Canada, England, France, Switzerland, Portugal and Italy in separate groups. All expenses are paid by the CAP, which is an auxiliary of the United States Air Force but is financed privately by its members. The Air Force will provide the planes, however, to transport the 140 youngsters across the sea and in this country.

In his annual report to convention members last week, Maj. Gen. Lucas V. Beau, national commander, said the Civil Air Patrol now has more than 160,000 members, consisting of both active and inactive senior members and cadet members.

Rapid strides in expansion of CAP were made during the year, which saw the number of aircraft used in the program grow to some 3000, owned privately by CAP members, and 300 loaned by the USAF, he said. The CAP now has about 7800 radio stations on its vast network. More and more secondary schools have been receiving CAP material on aviation to arouse the interest of youth in aviation and CAP has been taking an increasingly active part in Air Rescue, he reported.

GAO Assailed As U. S. Budget Reform Block

NYHT News Service

Budgetary reforms and administration of a House-approved one-billion-dollar slash in the omnibus appropriation bill are endangered by the General Accounting Office's insistence of "weak and obsolete accounting," a Hoover citizens' committee official charged last night.

Robert L. L. McCormick, research director of the committee, noted that a start has been made toward a performance or program budget, but that the "reform is in danger right now and will eventually fall unless the accounting of the Federal Government improves apace."

"The chief obstacle to the accounting reforms urged by the Hoover Commission as basic to the whole reorganization program is the opposition of the General Accounting Office, an agency of Congress independent of the executive branch," McCormick said. "It's opposition rests on unwillingness to grant clear responsibility to the Executive, even in cases where it lacks authority itself."

Discussing the 600-million-dollar cut sponsored by Representatives John Taber (R., N. Y.), and Albert Thomas (D., Tex.), and the 400-million-dollar slash backed by Representative Ben F. Jensen (R., Iowa), McCormick said:

"Inadequate accounting practices increased greatly the difficulties in administering these economy amendments. These well-intentioned moves have a laudable purpose, to stop waste through excessive personnel. With adequate accounting and financial control, they should pose no major difficulties . . . Given the present woefully inadequate accounting system, they may wreck the reforms in the budget field."

In a progress report entitled, "The Future of Program Budgeting," McCormick noted that no changes have been made in accounting systems since 1921, and charged the General Accounting Office with being "the chief obstacle to the accounting reforms urged by the Hoover commission."

"Accounting deficiencies are the primary reason why many members of the House were dissatisfied with the current budget," he said.

70th Year Helping Build Greater Washington

Parkview

. . . Section of Washington between Georgia Avenue and U.S. Soldiers Home, Columbia Road and Rock Creek Church Road.

The name of Parkview undoubtedly was influenced by the Soldiers Home Park, skirting the community on the eastern side. Only about twelve blocks long and two blocks wide, its western boundary of Georgia Avenue is today largely given to small shops and business, family owned.

When the only public transportation out Georgia Avenue was the picturesque Red Bird Stagecoach, Washington Permanent was already playing an important role in making practical, easy-to-meet loan repayment plans for residents.

We welcome the opportunity to help you devise a financing plan suited to your income and expenses—for a home of your own in nearby Maryland, Virginia, or the District of Columbia.

London, May 28 (NYHT).—The British government has refused a French request to approve in principle the Schuman plan for an international merger of European coal and steel industries, it was established authoritatively today.

A communication from Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, delivered Saturday in Paris, reiterated Britain's willingness to begin prompt negotiations with France and Germany on the now-famous pool scheme. But until such negotiations revealed in full detail the long-range effects of the plan, the British note said, the government could not commit itself to a prior declaration of approval such as France sought.

today by a Foreign Office source, thus pointed up the sharp difference in French and British outlook on the industrial merger which has recently developed. The British approach is one of caution. While applauding the French initiative, the government is wary lest French enthusiasm carry it into a program which would undermine Britain's industrial stability.

The British contend further that approval in principle of the Schuman program would mean a fundamental policy decision which Parliament should first have an opportunity to debate. Soon after the initial proposal, the Labor government asked that debate be postponed pending the receipt of more details, and the Conservative leader, Winston Churchill, readily agreed.

It was reported at the foreign office that no date had been set for commencement of the European merger talks. The British would take no further steps, it was said, until the French government issued a conference call.

French Queen Crowned Saint By Pope Pius

Vatican City, May 28 (AP).—A French queen who was deprived of her earthly throne by a king-husband who hated her was crowned a saint today in St. Peter's Basilica.

Pope Pius XII solemnly raised to sainthood gentle Jeanne de Valois, abused wife of King Louis XII, who met the bitterest humiliations with good deeds.

Forty thousand Holy Year pilgrims, including 25,000 from France and French Africa, thronged the Basilica for the long rite of canonization.

The Pope fixed February 4, anniversary of her death in 1505, as her saint's day—the day on which she is to be venerated.

In a homily, the Pope appealed to men "to learn that virtue, and not earthly greatness, wealth or temporal joys will bring them happiness."

Born sickly and partly deformed, Jeanne was banished to a desolate country castle by her father, Louis XI, who loathed her. There she first turned to the Blessed Virgin for consolation.

For political ends, her father forced her to marry Louis, Duke of Orleans, his second cousin, who later became king. He, too, despised her and met her affection and devotion with public insults. Soon after he gained the throne, he had the marriage annulled.

She founded the order of the Annonciades and took the vows herself toward the end of her life.

After the ceremony, the Pope appeared on the balcony of the Basilica and blessed the faithful in the square. In his homily the Pope urged men to "extinguish hatred," and nations "to unite in fraternal harmony."

Eleven cardinals and 75 bishops attended the ceremony.

4 Held as Key Links in Check Raising Ring

Manila, May 28 (AP). — Four American veterans of the Philippines liberation campaign were arrested by Manila police last night and accused as key figures in an international ring specializing in raising United States Treasury checks.

The formal charges were attempted embezzlement through falsification of official documents. All four were held in lieu of 10,000 pesos ($5000) bail each.

Manila police identified them as Charles Clarence, 46, formerly of San Francisco; James Hanley, 25, formerly of Akron, Ohio; Walter E. Mason, 25, formerly of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Carlos Moore Turner, 25, a native of Florida.

All four took their discharges in the Philippines after the war, and Turner and Mason married Filipina girls, police records showed.

The police department reported that Clarence and Hanley passed a United States veteran's benefit check to an undercover police agent.

The check was one of 16 on a "blacklist" sent to Philippines authorities by the United States Government. Police said it had been made out originally for $1.37 but had been skillfully altered to read $1374.44.

Investigators alleged that the men were "key links" in a check-raising chain that was operating in the United States, Hongkong, the Philippines, Guam and Hawaii.

The United States Federal Reserve Bank in New York disclosed May 18 that many Treasury checks mailed to the Philippines had been "fraudulently raised" before they got back to American banking channels. Most of them, it said, showed they had been cleared through Hongkong.

Israel Rejects U. N. Plan for Jerusalem

Lake Success, May 28 (NYHT.). Israel formally rejected today the United Nations plan for strict internationalization of Jerusalem, and proposed a substitute formula offering to accept a U. N.-imposed authority over Holy places and all other matters of universal religious concern in Jerusalem.

The strict plan, which gives the U. N. sovereignty over Jerusalem and vicinity, is "inherently unimplementable," Israel said, while advancing the new formula that goes a step beyond any proposal put forward by the Jewish state in the past.

The U. N. plan has been consistently opposed by both Israel and Jordan—the military occupiers of Jerusalem. It is no longer supported by the United States, Britain or Russia, and though the U. N. Trusteeship Council recently put finishing touches on the plan on paper in Geneva, the council session opening here Thursday is expected to confess inability to put the plan in operation.

The principal new element in the new Israeli proposal is that the Tel Aviv government agrees to permit the U. N. to impose on Jerusalem a special authority for the holy places. At the last U. N. General Assembly, Israel suggested a substitute for strict internationalization, but insisted it take the form of a treaty between Israel and the U. N.

Whether or not anything will come of the new proposal depends on the attitude of Hashemite Jordan, which occupies the old walled city, while Israel controls the modern city.

In today's note, Israel said that if its new substitute paln were not acceptable, it would cooperate in creating an international regime over the area where holy places are most concentrated.

Nationalists Admit Loss of Wanshan Isles

Taipei, Formosa, May 28 (U.P.)—An official spokesman admitted today that Nationalist forces have abandoned the Wanshan (Ladrone) Islands, but said the retreating troops are now entrenched on nearby Linting Island, in the middle of the Pearl River estuary.

Nationalist evacuation of the Wanshans has been reported at least twice, but today's statement was the first official confirmation.

The spokesman said Communist troops attacked on Thursday, forcing the Nationalist navy to evacuate Lafsami Island, the only place where the Nationalists had a regular garrison.

The garrison was withdrawn yesterday morning to Linting Island, the spokesman said. He indicated that guerillas are still operating on other islands in the Wanshan chain.

An officail announcement said that "our (Nationalist) ships still maintain free movement in the Pearl River estuary" despite the abandonment of the Wanshans.

Garment Workers $110 Million Union, Dubinsky Reports

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28 (AP). David Dubinsky today reported his International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL) is a 110-million-dollar organization.

The union's international office has cash assets of $9,273,269.42, he said in a financial and statistical report to be presented Monday at the ILGWU convention. There are other general office assets of almost four million dollars, the report said.

Dubinsky is president and secretary-treasurer of the union.

The total includes assets of locals and joint boards ($19,365,137.08), health and welfare funds ($44,758,078.46), retirement funds for members ($26,998,952.26), and miscellaneous items and special funds, he said. Some of the funds are administered jointly by the union and employes, Dubinsky said.

The union employs 1522 persons for organizing and clerical purposes, with a weekly payroll of $103,105, the report said.

Power Companies Ask U. S. to Stop Its Competition

By the United Press

The National Association of Electric Companies called on the Government yesterday to stop performing services the private power industry is "ready, willing and able" to do.

The association, representing 100 private electric companies, issued a "redefinition and clarification" of its stand on the Government's role in the production of electric power.

It supported Federal flood control, reclamation and conservation projects but called for "closer cooperation between public bodies and industry" in the interest of consumers and taxpayers."

Sylvan Theater Is Scene of Legion Induction . . .

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

SPECTATORS AND NEW MEMBERS WATCH AS THE COLORS ARE ADVANCED AT YESTERDAY'S CEREMONIES

200 Inducted Into Legion At First Public Ceremony

Some 200 new members were inducted into the American Legion yesterday in an elaborate ritual held publicly for the first time.

The ceremony, at the Sylvan Theater on the Monument grounds, was climaxed by a solemn pledge by the new members to defend the Constitution, maintain law and order and foster 100 percent Americanism.

The group also pledged themselves to "combat the autocracy of both classes and the masses."

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho), principal speaker, appealed to the Legion and similar groups of "peacetime soldiers" to "coordinate" the home front against the "virtual fifth column" which, he said, would sabotage atomic and industrial plants in case of war.

He declared we face "infiltration in high places" and we "must not overlook these latent dangers at home" while keeping up our armed forces. Also needed, he said, is a sound economy, a solvent Government, stockpiling of strategic materials and a great productive plant.

The induction ceremony was carried out on the stage of the theater with 16 men representing the entire group of new Legionnaires, the others being seated in the front rows of the audience.

After the sounding of "To the Colors" by the Marine Corps drum and bugle corps, the flag was raised by four amputee holders of the Distinguished Service Medal from Walter Reed Hospital. They were George Helwig, Joseph Svreek, Samuel Pleasant and Louis B. Immerman.

The initiation of the new Legionnaires was conducted by a ritual team of the Grande Voiture 174, Forty and Eight, headed by Francis F. Miller, national sous chef de chemin de fer.

Following a prayer, the inductee group marched successively to three different stations on the stage. At each station, a member of the ritual team instructed the new Legionnaires on one of the cardinal principles of the Legion.

Vice Commander Merritt Gordon instructed them in the principle of Justice, Past Commander Raymond J. Queenin gave instructions on Freedom, and First Vice Commander Harry F. McMasters instructed in Democracy.

Following the oath of allegiance, Miller welcomed the group into the D. C. Department of the Legion.

Gail T. Judd, grande chef de gare of the Forty and Eight, was master of ceremonies. Prayers were given by the Rev. William B. Adams, Legion department chaplain, Chaplain Louis Barish, U. S. A., and Chaplain James Murphy, U. S. A. Music was furnished by the United States Maritime Service Band and Mrs. Florence E. Daly, soloist.

$11,000 Jewelry Theft Reported at Ex-Sheriff's Home

Elkton, Md., May 28 (AP). — Thieves broke into the home of former Sheriff and Mrs. Ralph Robinson here last night, stealing jewelry valued at $11,000 from a small, well-hidden safe in a bedroom.

Robinson told police he believed it was an inside job. The safe was fitted inside a table stand and completely hidded, he said, so that a burglar unfamiliar with the house probably would not have looked there.

The jewelry was taken while the Robinsons were away from their home for about four hours, visiting friends in the neighborhood. They returned home shortly before midnight.

Robinson was sheriff of Cecil County from 1942 to 1946. Currently, he is in the retail plumbing and heating business.

U. S. Jets With Refueling Aid To Fly Atlantic Non-Stop

London, May 28 (U.P.).—United States jet fighters will begin flying the Atlantic nonstop this summer, refueling en route from "flying tankers," Air Force officers said today.

The American jet planes, based alongside American bombers in Britain, have flown the Atlantic before but have been forced to stop at island bases en route for fuel.

The jets, a squadron of hard-hitting F-84 Thunderjets, will be based in England with American B-29 Superfortresses and B-50s converted for atomic bombing—on "rotational tours."

It was believed they may begin arriving early in July.

Air Force officers said in addition to planes in England on temporary duty, others will fly the Atlantic and stop off here en route to Germany where they will bolster the American Third Air Division.

They said the F-84s will replace piston-engined F-47 Thunderbolts now based in Germany with the occupation Air Force. The addition of the Thunderjets will complete a program begun last year to shape the Army's Second Division in Germany into a modern fighter-bomber organization.

The Thunderjets, particularly suited to attack bombing and strafing missions, are to be meshed with German-based F-80 Shooting Stars which authorities regard as good interceptors, Air Force officials said.

United States airmen meanwhile have been extending runways on their British bases to make them suitable for jet fighters, but authorities categorically denied the runways were being extended to accommodate B-36 bombers.

Everything at Steak!

—By Albert Parchey Mesirow

TOMORROW, Tuesday, being Memorial Day, our doors will be closed. Who wants to stay in a deserted city, anyhow? But tonight, we suggest that you bring your Little Flower here for a special holiday of her own. We'll regale you both with the choicest viands and most tempting wines . . . and no dishes to wash afterwards. If you think that won't make a hit, just phone her and ask!

Sir John Suckling, the 16th Century English poet, was a love-sick man. He wrote ardently and gracefully of his pursuit of an always unattainable female, and took great delight in the pain of his frustrations. I will not challenge his reputation as an authority in that field, but when he wrote "'Tis not the meat but 'tis the appetite Makes eating a delight," he just didn't know what he was talking about! Here at Parchey's we make it our business to see that the joys of your satisfaction completely eclipse those of your anticipation. Of course, we recognize that anticipation has its delights, too, and so when you come in and order (for instance) a filet mignon, we suggest that in the brief interval of waiting, you occupy your leisure by sipping a fragrant and aromatic martini, to sharpen the keen edge of your expectation. Then comes an almost agonizing instant of tantalizing delay as your filet is placed before you in all its juicy glory! The redolent steam of fragrant mushrooms blended with the rich natural juices of beef assails your senses for a heady moment as you plunge your knife into the firm, tender meat. But as each succulent forkful passes your lips, your pleasure increases, for each bite is in itself a new gastronomical adventure. There's the crisp taste of the seared and crackly surface; the fulsome flavor of the luscious, hearty meat that seems, somehow, to melt magically in your mouth; the savory ecstasy of the delicate mushroom sauce! At the end of your meal, your appetite has gone into temporary retirement, but your capacity for enjoying fine food has been immeasurably increased! Parchey's is no place for the apostles of frustration. Sir John Suckling probably wouldn't have enjoyed a visit to 19th and K Sts., N.W. But you will!

Most poets like to sing of spring,
Of flowers nodding in the breeze;
But I prefer my song to sing
Of pleasures more mundane than these!

I sing the epicure's song
Of festive boards, and heaping trays,
Of life that's rich and full and long;
The chorus of my song: Parchey's!

One of the cartoonists' richest fields of humor is the predicament of friendly callers who find themselves trapped in the web of their host's devotion to his children. But the reader of a newspaper column is not compelled, out of politeness, to watch interminable reels of home-made movies of Junior. He, and you, can simply turn the page when interest lags. So you need feel no compulsion to read about my son, Harold Parchey Mesirow, who has just received one of the coveted 4-year Trustees' Scholarships to George Washington University. Harold will be 18 on October 25. We like to believe that he was a "thought control" child. There was no other male to carry the Mesirow name, so his parents determined that their first-born should be a boy. He was. He grew up as any normal American boy; became a Cub Scout and then a full-fledged Boy Scout. He started in the old Force School, but as Parchey's prospered, Harold went to other schools in better neighborhoods: to John Quincy Adams, to Ben W. Murch, to Alice Deal Junior High and to the Honors List at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. Next month he graduates from Woodrow Wilson High, a member of the Honor Society. No bookworm, Harold is a swimmer of note and (nearer to his father's heart) a fisherman who only last weekend caught two weakfish on the same line simultaneously and brought to gaff a 15-pound shark and a very repulsive 15-pound sea lizard. In five or six years, you will, I hope, learn to know Harold better, for his ambition is to eventually take over the management of Parchey's, and give his father what he believes to be a well-deserved rest. Will you please pardon my pride? After all, only two Trustees' Scholarships are given to each High School a year, and one of these must be to a girl!

Taft Softens Opposition To Aid Plan

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) softened his opposition to President Truman's Point 4 program yesterday with a proposal for limited guarantees on American investments in the world's backward areas.

Taft told a reporter he thinks the Government might well guarantee that some of the profits could be brought home. He said he would be willing to guarantee that up to 5 percent of any firm's business revenue abroad could be converted into American dollars and thus brought home as profit.

"I don't think we should go into a wide field of currency conversion activities, but I would not object to a 5 percent provision so that there could be some profit return," he said.

Taft, who joined Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) in an unsuccessful fight against a Point 4 provision in a foreign aid bill passed by the Senate last week, made it clear he doesn't think any investment guarantee program should be undertaken without more study.

Administration leaders have denied that the Point 4 proposal—made by President Truman in his inaugural address last year—is intended to pick up where the Marshall Plan will leave off in 1952.

As it was approved in the foreign aid bill, Senator Connally (D., Tex.) said the program would be limited to giving technical aid to other countries.

Pending on the Senate calendar is a bill which would authorize the Export-Import Bank to go into the business of guaranteeing American investments abroad, under certain conditions.

However, Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee, which approved the measure last year, said he isn't satisfied with it in its present form.

Maybank said it ought to be amended to make it certain that American firms which have risked capital abroad on their own initiative wouldn't be penalized by having United States competitors come into the territories they have developed a Communist putsch, that the East is seeking to interest the marching youngsters in future careers as soldiers and already has laid the foundation for an automaton state.

HER 83D BIRTHDAY—Queen Mary looks from her coach as she arrives at Buckingham Palace to attend a family luncheon party given by England's King and Queen in her honor

Berlin Rally Is Peaceful

The peaceful passing of the big Communist demonstration brought a "victory" claim from West Berlin's Mayor Ernst Reuter.

"Our peaceful determination, together with the support we received from the Allies, has resulted in a complete failure of Communist dreams to overrun Berlin," he said.

He made his claim in a telegram to Rear Admiral Richard Byrd of the International Rescue Committee in New York.

The East German Radio taunted the West for its show of steel "while peace-loving German youths sing," but East German police were just as alert to prevent any trouble. They lined the rooftops and took stations every six feet along the line of march to scrutinize all spectators.

Allied Security Headquarters reported 38 East Zone police had deserted and sought refuge in the West since the rally began.

The blue-shirted legions were called out by buglers at 4 a. m. and began assembling for their march at 7 a. m. in a light drizzle which turned into a driving rain as the parade began.

The marching continued nearly eight hours—from 9:15 a. m. until 5 p. m.

Crowds along the line of march were thin, and the cheering at most places was sparse. West Berliners were free to stroll into the East Zone to watch, but most preferred to remain indoors, go to an American or British movie or attend the city's first postwar auto show.

In the ranks of the marchers were about 5000 who carried banners saying they were from West Germany. Most of Russia's eastern satellite countries were represented in the giant parade.

The marchers carried banners ridiculing "American chewing gum and magazines," attacking "Anglo-American imperialism" and hailing German "heroes" in Soviet Zone uranium mines.

American culture was lampooned with a sketch of female wrestlers pulling hair.

Aid for Backward Nations Rests On Self-Help, U. N. Stresses

Lake Success, May 28 (AP).—The United Nations gave strong notice today to economically backward nations that their best bet in getting outside help to build up their economy is by showing the world what they can do for themselves.

The advice is stressed in a report of the seven-nation subcommission on economic development being forwarded to the summer meeting of the Economic and Social Council beginning in Geneva July 3.

Russia and Czechoslovakia walked out of the subcommission sessions here in April and May but experts from the United States, Mexico, Brazil, China, and India signed the report.

Prompt and determined action in self-help by underdeveloped countries is urgent, the report said.

"It is most important that underdeveloped countries mobilize their own resources for the promotion of a self-determined course of economic development, suitable to their resources and needs and carried out without waiting for, or relying unduly upon, foreign assistance," the report said.

It made clear that foreign or international aid can speed up economic development and in many cases this will be necessary, but added that the chance to get such aid on an increased scale depends "in a high degree upon domestic organization and activity advancing economic development."

The report made plain that the United States is the chief contributor today to any foreign investment plan.

It pointed out that many underdeveloped countries have basic natural resources such as forests and iron ores, and that their development offers opportunities for expanded trade with industrialized countries as well as for domestic development.

This would help overcome dollar gap or other balance of payment difficulties faced by most industrial countries.

The report also suggested several attractions for private investment, including guaranties of security to foreign persons and property and compensating investors adequately if public authority takes over their properties.

Loan Granted Brazil Firm

The World Bank announced yesterday a 15-million-dollar loan for power development in the Northwest area of Brazil.

The money will buy foreign equipment for a 55-million-dollar dam and power plant being constructed at Paulo Aronso Ralls on the Sao Francisco River.

The 25-year loan was granted to the Sao Francisco Hydroelectric Co. of Brazil, in which the Brazilian government is majority stock owner. The company is to invest 40 million dollars in local currency out of its own funds.

The project is one of Brazil's major efforts to develop the vast, sparsely poulated area by making cheaper electricity available.

It is also a significant step in cooperation between governments and private eterprise abroad.

The bank pointed out that the electricity produced by the new government power station will be sold only to private companies operating in the area for distribution through their existing facilities.

This arrangement is in line with the Brazilian government's announced policy of engaging only in basic industries for the promotion of private enterprises.

The bank's announcement of the loan occurred almost a year to the day when President Truman promised Brazilian President Eurico Gaspar Dutra, then visiting here, that the United States would give "most attentive consideration" to Brazilian loan requests.

Technicians Sought for Point 4 Projects

Between 1200 and 1400 American soil experts, engineers, public health personnel and other technicians will be needed for foreign service in the first year of the Point Four program, officials estimated yesterday.

Sixty countries have already requested the help of American experts, or have made inquiries about getting it, under the world-wide program of technical help which Congress has just approved.

The bill authorizing this program is being engrossed and checked for President Truman's signature.

Government agencies already foresee a difficult problem in recruiting men and women who have the necessary training and are willing to spend three years or more in distant posts abroad.

The emphasis in the first year of the program will be in fields of public health, agriculture and education Federal officials expect they can find enough talent in these fields if they are able to draw on the State and municipal government experts, as the new law enables them to do.

But bottlenecks are developing in other fields of technical aid, notably in finding geologists who can help backward countries to discover and develop mineral wealth. The Economic Cooperation Administration is having trouble finding 25 American geologists who can help the Marshall Plan countries develop their colonial resources.

The State Department has charge of the Point 4 program, but leaves the recruiting of experts to other Government agencies, like the Department of Agriculture and the Public Health Service, which have the specialized knowledge and skills.

Fairfax School Vote Slated Wednesday

rallied to the support of the expenditure are four of the county's principal real estate operators and landowners, Eugene J. Olmi, Vernon M. Lynch, Malcolm Mathson, jr., and Omer L. Hirst. All contend that failure of the bond issue would amount to failure to solve the current school problem, bringing an "inevitable" decline in land values.

Both Olmi and Hirst pointed out that families contemplating moving to Fairfax County have sought homes elsewhere because they fear inadequate school facilities.

In contrast to the widespread support, there has been relatively little evidence of opposition to the bond issue. Two organizations have come out publicly against it.

The county's Taxpayers Advisory Association, headed by Edward F. Gibbons, has termed the expenditure "unsuitable" and "unrealistic." It charges the board of education has no specific plans for its building program and alleges the 10½-million-dollar figure is a "lump sum decided on by compromise."

Double Payment Seen

In the Falls Church area, the Fairfax County Committee for Better Government opposes the bond issue on the ground that residents of two areas which may be taken from the county by annexation might be forced to pay doubly for school facilities. It contends that the annexation zones, in final court settlement, would have to pay a proportionate share of the bond debt regardless of whether they benefit by the building program.

Besides sharing in the bond debt, the committee insists, residents of the newly annexed areas would also be required to help pay the county for any schools that might be built with the bond funds. The committee argues that the annexation decree will specify that the county be reimbursed for physical properties lost by annexation. Or, if no new schools are built by the time annexation is resolved, these residents would have to share the cost of new schools needed to serve their area.

Proponents of the bond issue reply with these two contentions: (1) The annexation trials probably will be completed before any bonds are sold, therefore the occupants of annexation zones cannot be assessed for a share of the county's bonded indebtedness, and (2) a "fair and impartial" financial settlement by the annexation court would preclude such inequities as "double payment."

Alternatives Presented

In still another answer to the Committee for Better Government, Newell Blair, a member of the emergency school committee, warns that if both annexation and the bond issue fail, residents of the so-called "annexable" zones will still lack adequate schools.

In urging support of the bond issue, proponents confront the opposition with these alternatives if the proposal is defeated: (1) Continued overcrowding of schools or (2) a direct tax levy that might be as high as $6 on the $100 valuation in order to correct existing conditions.

The latter probably would be the result, they argue, since State law requires the school board to build adequate buildings for its pupils. They prefer long-range bond financing to a pay-as-you-go building program that would affect every property owner in the county through inflated taxation.

Although confident of the outcome, the bond issue advocates have conducted a determined "get out the vote" campaign. Meetings were held throughout the county every night last week and, for the most part, brought favorable reaction. The only substantial opposition was encountered at a meeting in the Oak Street School in Falls Church.

With the Memorial Day holiday falling Tuesday, the bond issue advocates have scheduled no additional rallies, but count on a vigorous word-of-mouth campaign to bring them additional votes by Wednesday.

County election officials have listed these polling places for the referendum:

said. Bond gave chase and had caught him when the other police car returned.

The man led the policemen to his car, parked on a trail in woods about a mile from the home, where they found the couple's two children, Warren, 2, clad only in training pants, and Beverly, seven months, wrappe din a thin blanket.

The police took the children to the home of a neighbor, who cared for them until the grandparents took them late yesterday afternoon.

Sidall said the couple had been to a party and returned home, where they became involved in an argument which lasted until they went to bed. The husband, a veteran, is alleged to have shot the wife with a .25-caliber German-make automatic pistol.

Police said Whitlock told them: "I made a damn fool mistake. I lost my head."

They said he still appeared dazed late yesterday.

The prisoner was said to be a coppersmith at the Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue. The couple had purchased the home under the GI bill and had moved there only about three weeks ago, according to neighbors.

The pair had been quarreling Saturday, police said they were told. Siddall said the wife told him that she had not been used to drinking but had been persuaded to take a couple of drinks at the party and they made her "groggy." She attributed the argument to this, Siddall said.

Hearing on the charges has been set for today in County Police Court at Upper Marlboro. Up last night, Whitlock had been u able to obtain the $10,000 bon Condition of the wife was d scribed as "fair" by the hospital.

Letters piling up in The Ideal Father Contest of 1950 could make any talent scout happy. Family men of all shapes, sizes, descriptions, professions, talents and ambitions have had their personalities disclosed by the wife, kids or admirers.

Contest deadline isn't until June 9, so more will be added to the list.

The best-dressed family of this year's Easter Parade nominated the "head of the house," Harold Stiles, 223 Lynnwood st., Alexandria, Va.

"He is interesting to talk to. . . . he has lived in Mexico, Australia, Panama and Argentina, as well as traveled extensively in other countries of the world. He is really wonderful!"

Instead of worrying about what to give your pa June 18, compose a winning letter, and let The Washington Post do the gift-giving. Some surprises are cooking, but it's no secret that the Ideal Father will be holiday publicized, interviewed over the radio and entertained at dinner and a show. The family of the winner, of course, will celebrate with him.

An "all-around-guy" to Amy Catherine Schwartz, 4704 33rd st. nw., is her chemist-father.

"He had polio, but does things well and I'll tell you why. When he had polio, he was sick for a whole year and when he got better things were very hard for him to do.

"Now most of the other people didn't have polio, so they didn't practice so much because they knew how, but he practiced a lot, even when he got to know how very well he practiced so he got to be even better. He was a life guard and a champion swimmer, a boxer, and an acrobat, and he won medals. He is a good golfer now."

"My father is a chemist, and brings home detergents for mother's dishes and bubble bath. He makes lots of interesting things. Sometimes he brings home chemicals and does color magic for me."

"My father's name is Anthony M. Schwartz.

"Sincerely yours,

"Amy Catherine Schwartz (8)."

Letters should be in your own handwriting. (A mother can write for baby)

Where possible, mention age of person you tell about. Sign the entry with full name, address and school you are attending or did attend.

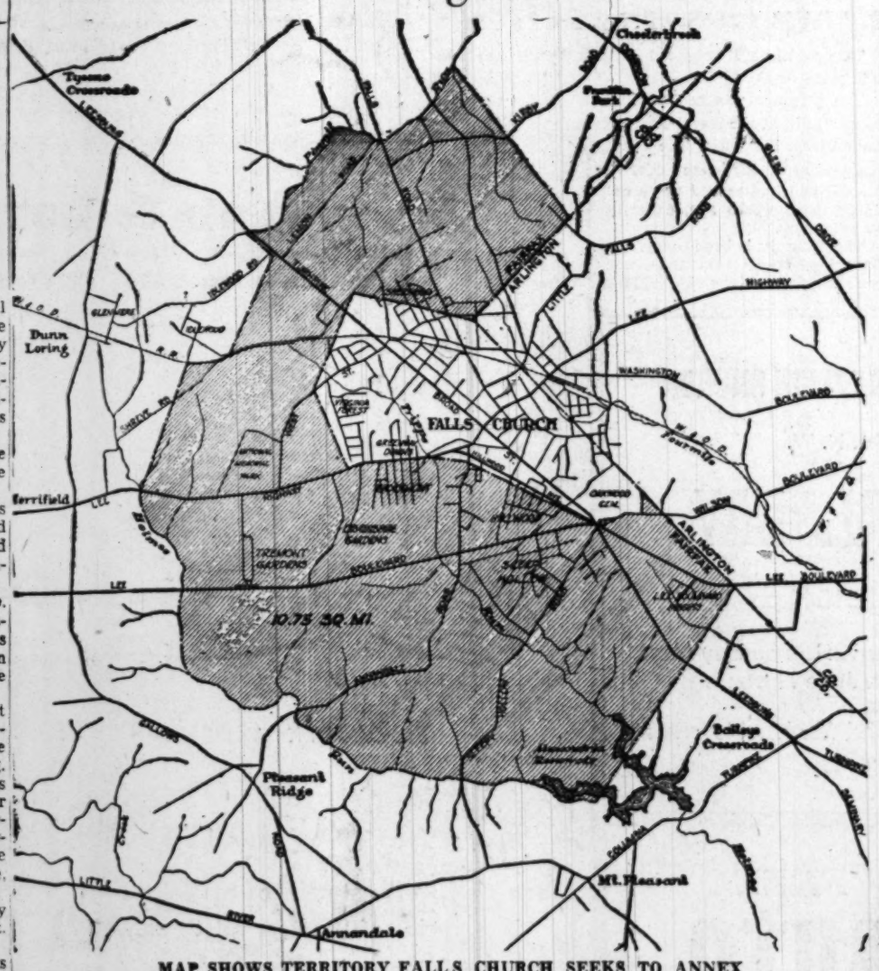
Lines Drawn for Hot Legal Battle June 19



MAP SHOWS TERRITORY FALLS CHURCH SEEKS TO ANNEX

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

The battle lines are drawn for a bitter legal fight over a 10.75-square-mile piece of Fairfax County, that the city of Falls Church wants to annex.

The governmental fate of from 12,000 to 15,000 residents in the area will be decided by a special annexation court June 19. It is composel of Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown, Judge J. R. H. Alexander, of the 26th Circuit, and Judge Burnett Miller, jr., of the Ninth Circuit.

Should the suit succeed, the 2-square-mile city would be 6½ times its present area. Its population of 7500 would be approximately tripled, and its total assessed tax value would rise from 6 million dollars to about 21 million dollars, accoring to unofficial estimates.

The $15 million in taxable real and personal property values in the annexation area, is the key to Fairfax County officials' vehement opposition to the annexation suit.

If Falls Church wins the annexation area, it has two alternatives, under state law:

1. If it makes no capital improvements in the annexed area, it must maintain the present county tax rate ($3.19) for five years. During this period, all tax money from the area must be spent for capital improvements within the area. Operational expenses in the annexation area would have to be footed by the residents of the former city area.

2. It can spend 12 percent of the assessed land value of the annexation area, or about $1.44 million, on capital improvements there. When these are "substantially" completed, it could raise the area's tax rate to the city's level (proposed for $4.55 this year.)

City officials expect to use the second plan. However, its use would depend on approval of the necessary bond issue by a referendum of all qualified city voters.

If the 12 percent plan is carried out, officials expect most of the money—probably a million dollars or more—would be used for schools. Other high priority items would be a firehouse, a new police station and jail, and storm sewers for the new territory.

Both city and county legal experts are keeping mum on what will be their court arguments in the case.

However, here are some of the arguments—for and against annexation—gathered from officials and interested residents of the city and county:

FOR

1. The city and annexable area already form a single unit in fact, with common business, social, church and recreational ties.

2. The annexation area, quickly becoming urbanized, needs the services of a city government, including garbage and trash collection, increased police and fire protection, a master zoning plan and stricter building standards for subdivision developers.

3. Residents of the area will get more for their tax dollar as part of the city.

4. City residents will benefit because the city's almost exhausted debt limit—now about one million dollars—will be expanded to about three million dollars.

5. The city will be able to reduce its tax year after about 2 years. It may even go as low as the current county rate of $3.19.

AGAINST

1. Annexation of so large an area would be a case of the "tail wagging the dog." The city can't afford the project, which would cost more in expensive services—particularly schools—than it will bring in in taxes.

2. Residents of the annexation area would be better off staying in Fairfax County, and plugging for the county manager form of government, which could serve adequately its urban needs.

3. Falls Church is pushing the annexation suit in order to distribute a too-high cost of government operation over a wider tax base. It plans to "milk" the annexation area.

4. Annexation area residents depend primarily on Washington, not Falls Church, for their living, and thus are not an integrated part economically of Falls Church.

Vice Bosses Duck Probe Heat

Chicago, May 28 (U.P.).—Gambling and vice have dwindled here since a Senate committee began investigating "syndicate" operations.

The big overlords of crime have passed the word down the line to their lieutenants to lie low, keep out of trouble and wait for the heat to cool.

Many of the big shots suddenly have decided the spring air of the country hereabouts or at obscure resorts is healthier.

Ralph (Bottles) Capone, Jake Guzik, Golf Bag Sammy Hunt and others have vanished from their usual haunts in Chicago.

Chicago police say syndicate crime here is at its lowest ebb, partly because of the cleanup campaign of Mayor Martin Kennelly, but more recently because of the Senate probe.

Most gambling or vice that is continuing here is of the "punk," unorganized variety, or syndicate operations placed in the hands of lieutenants little known to the police. The syndicate chiefs may fear the Senate committee, but they're not letting their business languish completely.

Virginia County Finances Slump

Richmond, Va., May 28 (AP).—The financial condition of Virginia's 100 counties has grown worse for the second straight year.

In the words of State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett, fiscal 1949 left a "substantial impairment" of county government finances, on a comparative basis with other years of the 1940-49 decade.

The main cause, cited by Bennett in his annual report on the comparative cost of local government, was "substantial capital outlay expenditures."

Most of these were for school buildings, to help meet the pent-up demand for classroom facilities and house the rising school population.

Gaming-Crime Link Reported

Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who sponsored the $150,000 inquiry.

Other cities likely to come under scrutiny include Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, Detroit and Kansas City, President Truman's old political stamping ground.

Would Investigate Tie-up

Republicans want the committee to look into an alleged tie-up between crime and Democratic politics in Kansas City.

Kefauver and Hunt made no advance announcement of their Miami journey. Hunt said, however, that they sent several investigators ahead to line up witnesses and prepare subpenas requiring them to testify.

While Hunt refused to go into detail on the testimony received, it was understood the Senators checked on the Miami connections of Frank Costello, Frank Erickson and Joe Adonis.

Marshal Smuts Ill, Calls Off Celebration

Pretoria, South Africa, May 28 (AP).—Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts became ill today and called off a series of public engagements arranged in a week-long celebration of his eightieth birthday.

Smuts, who turned 80 last Wednesday, also cancelled his departure for Britain, scheduled for June 2.

A member of the family said doctors had ordered Smuts to bed. He was described as in pain because of a back ailment attributed to a sciatic nerve. Marshal Smuts was Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa from 1919 to 1924 and from 1939 to 1948.

Statute Dies On Missouri Vote Frauds

Kansas City, May 28 (AP).—The legal door slammed shut today on the possibility of Federal prosecution in Kansas City's 1947 ballot thefts.

But the legal lock contains a loophole that could lead to further Federal action in the incident that reverberated to the Nation's Capital.

Expired Yesterday

The statute of limitations on Federal prosecution expired today—three years after a Jackson County election commissioner came upon the nitro-blasted storage vault in the city's modern courthouse building. Three sealed ballot boxes, which had contained evidence in a grand jury investigation of alleged vote frauds in the 1946 election, had been emptied and the contents gone.

Authorities say there is one loophole that might make late prosecution possible: The statute can be suspended if the thieves fled the State. It could be suspended for as long as they remained outside Missouri.

City and State law enforcement agencies were joined by the FBI in the investigation of the disappearance of the evidence. To date no concrete developments have been reported.

Many of the questioned ballots had been marked for a congressional candidate President Truman had been actively supporting.

Slaughter Purged

The President had successfully promoted a purge of Representative Roger C. Slaughter in favor of Enos Axtell in the Democratic primary. After the election a county grand jury returned 80 vote fraud indictments and expressed the belief Slaughter had been the victim of frauds which robbed him of the nomination.

Although he won the nomination, Axtell was defeated in the general election by Albert L. Reeves, jr.

That jury made its final report May 27, 1947. Sometime after midnight that night the courthouse vault was blasted and the evidence disappeared.

In Washington at the time, a Senate subcommittee was questioning Tom C. Clark, then Attorney General, regarding what the committee considered his failure to order a full-scale Federal investigation of the alleged vote frauds in Kansas City. Clark was on the witness stand when the news of the theft reached Washington.

The FBI had made an investigation of the alleged frauds and reported there was no evidence of Federal violation. The FBI was ordered into the case again after the theft.

Two months after the vote fraud evidence was taken, Mary Bono offered to give Federal authorities evidence on the vault case. She was murdered in gang style the night she made the offer.

In the months that followed two Federal grand juries returned 32 vote fraud indictments. The net result was that only one person received a prison sentence.

Woman Acts Cop At Crash Scene, 2 More Pile Up

Greensburg, Pa., May 28 (AP).—Mrs. Adeline Kuhns, 24, happened on the scene of a minor highway collision while driving near here today. She decided to help by directing traffic.

Within a few minutes the battered autos at the scene had increased from two to four. And Mrs. Kuhns was on her way to a hospital with possible fractures of both legs.

State Police Pvt. James Young vindicated the would-be lady cop, however. He arrested the masculine drivers of all four cars.

James said Mrs. Kuhns was hurt when another passing motorist failed to heed her signal and struck one of the wrecked cars, which then hit her. The fourth car joined the pileup when its driver got out after stopping on a hill without setting his hand brake.

Alleged Assailant Held In Jim Castiglia Case

Jim Castiglia, former Redskin fullback, was in Municipal Court Saturday to prosecute the man police say hit him from behind with a piece of pipe May 23.

Lawrence Tolliver, 1006 W st. nw., was held under $1000 bond by Judge Thomas D. Quinn and his case was continued until June 3.

Castiglia said he spent 26 hours in Garfield Hospital and eight stitches were taken in his scalp. He also reported shoulder injuries.

Police said the assault grew out of an argument between the two men about employment. Castiglia, who lives at 4205 Van Ness st. nw., runs the Kane Transfer Co., and Tolliver is a former employe.

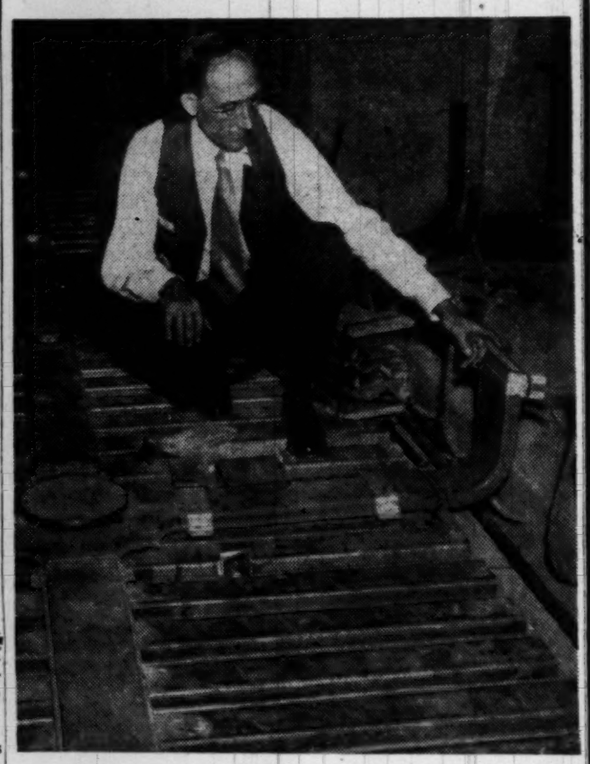
New Post Building Serving Technical Groups as School



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

DECKING EXAMINED—C. M. Godshalk, electrical superintendent for the architect on the new Washington Post building, examines the Robertson steel decking and metal conduit, through which wiring will be run. It is designed to take additional wires at any future date which will carry current and telephone wires beneath the floors.

The Washington Post's new building at 1513-21 L st. nw. is rapidly becoming one of Washington's most popular classrooms.

The building, the cement roof of which is scheduled to be poured Wednesday and Thursday, has attracted a number of architecture and engineering student groups from area universities.

The latest of the groups included architecture, civil, mechanical and electrical engineering students from Columbia Tech Institute and Howard University, who visited the project last week.

Accompanied by their instructors and guided by the building architect's superintendents, they saw the practical application of many of the principles they have been studying in books.

For the electrical engineering students, the piece de resistance is a network of steel decking with hollow cells only six inches apart

C. M. Godshalk, electrical superintendent for the architect, explained to the students that with this comparatively new construction, called Robertson steel decking, current or phone connections can be picked up at practically any spot in the floor by drilling into one of the hundreds of underlying ducts.

Overtime Work And Jobs

In spite of the marked rise in nonfarm employment this spring, the number of workers employed in factories was only slightly higher than in March and virtually unchanged from a year ago. The Bureau of Labor Statistics attributes this lag to increases in overtime work as an alternative to hiring new workers. The BLS estimates that about 400,000 more factory jobs would have been available last April if the working week had been the same as it was a year ago.

The practice of working overtime certainly should be discouraged at a time when unemployment prevails and in some localities is still distressingly high. Employers owe it to their communities to do all that is possible to provide jobs for the idle, especially when the men and women on their payrolls are already fully employed. Reluctance to train new workers is said to account in part for the practice of loading more work on the people who have jobs. Moreover, a good many employers have hesitated to take on additional workers because they believed that the current business upswing would soon be followed by a recession. From present indications there is good reason to assume that such fears are unfounded. Consequently, there is no excuse for a failure on the part of employers to assist efforts to reduce the amount of unemployment to a minimum by taking on new workers as soon as openings arise.

IUE Victory

The CIO's International Union of Electrical Workers has chalked up another victory in its struggle to win the allegiance of members of the radical left-wing United Electrical Workers, expelled last fall from the parent organization on charges of Communist domination. In the latest election conducted by the NLRB at the plants of the General Electric Co., the new CIO union captured 49 bargaining units representing about 54,000 employes, while the UE, formerly representing all the company's organized employes, won the right to act as bargaining agency for only 40 units with a membership of 36,700. Coupled with earlier victories at General Motors, Westinghouse and elsewhere, the IUE claims that it now represents two thirds of the members belonging to its rival at the time of expulsion from the CIO.

This is a notable achievement in view of the short time that has elapsed since the new union was launched. The fact that so many UE members have chosen to throw in their lot with a new and untried organization testifies to the strength of the anti-Communist sentiment prevailing among the rank and file. The General Electric and other polls also justify the belief that labor organizations can be trusted to deal with the problem of Communist infiltration of their own volition when the issue is squarely presented to the membership, as was the case in these representation elections.

Trail Of Coercion

Trial Examiner Charles L. Ferguson of the National Labor Relations Board has brought in some revealing findings to support his recommendation that the United Mine Workers be ordered to cease and desist from using violence against nonunion men. During a coal strike in June, 1949, the examiner found, the UMW and its District 28 invaded mine properties in Kentucky with a caravan of about 2000 men. The invaders would park their cars and buses near a mine, march to the office and demand that mine officials call all their men together. The nonunion men would be rounded up and usually "backed up against the wall of a building and surrounded by a solid mass of UMW men." Union officials would then threaten the men and tell them that they must join the union before going back to work. In some instances the workers' lunches were taken away from them and eaten by the "invaders" and their lunch boxes tossed away.

This lawlessness took place, according to the examiner's report, under the observation of and with the aid of, a Kentucky State patrolman and local sheriffs. Apparently these officials went along to warn mine officials that it would be best for them to summon their employes and then to shut down their mines at the behest of the mob in order to avoid "violence and damage." Of course, two or three officials could not restrain 2000 men bent on coercion or violence, but the very fact that such lawlessness is taken for granted and condoned in this fashion is a shocking state of affairs.

The NLRB examiner's findings naturally raise the question as to whether similar tactics were employed in the strike of last February when the miners defied a court order under the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to return to work. It was reported at the time—and charges have been amplified since—that violence was being used to prevent some of the miners from obeying the court order. What was the extent and origin of that violence? Obviously the facts ought to be explored, and they would have been explored if Chairman Lesinski of the House Labor and Education Committee, who died last week, had not deprived the Jacobs subcommittee of subpena powers. We hope that Mr. Lesinski's successor (under the seniority rule the post will go to Representative Barden) will let the inquiry go forward. Coercion and lawlessness are such grave threats to freedom that even the miners who have resorted to these tactics should be able to see the necessity of exposing and restraining them.

Disguised Propaganda

In a free country many evils can be disposed of by simply bringing them into the light of day. That is the theory behind the present law on lobbying. Agents who are attempting to influence legislation are required to register and disclose their connections. It is a sound approach, but there is question as to whether the law goes far enough. Representative Buchanan's lobby investigating committee has given emphasis to the fact that some of the most effective lobbyists never buttonhole legislators on Capitol Hill. They stir up public sentiment which is communicated to Congress and perhaps reflected in legislation.

The Buchanan committee is now attempting to find out who supports a number of organizations of this type. It has issued subpenas designed to compel three national organizations—the Committee for Constitutional Government, the National Economic Council and the Constitutional Educational League—to disclose the sources of their funds. Leaders of the CFCG and the NEC have been tried for contempt of Congress in the past for refusing to give the names of their financial backers. We think the public has a legitimate interest in knowing how such organizations are financed and hope the committee will not only require a public accounting in these cases but will also consider the advisability of sponsoring a bill to require all similar organizations to make detailed financial reports. Only contributions of $500 or more must be identified in reports to Congress under the present lobbying act.

In this country everyone has the right to make his voice heard, but there is no right to sail under false colors. If an organization is engaged in a worthy undertaking it cannot reasonably object to having the sources of its funds known. If it is engaged in subversive activities or any kind of racket, the public interest demands that the sources of its support be laid bare. We have often pleaded for a law that would require all organizations appealing to the public for funds or carrying on propaganda activities (excepting established churches) to make a public accounting of their receipts and expenditures. Useful though it may be in pointing up a principle, no committee investigation can take the place of continuous, systematic reporting of the facts. Only a statute requiring organizations to operate in the open can protect the public from being mulcted for subversive or special-interest causes and from being hoodwinked by propagandists in disguise.

Gag On Discussion

The American Civil Liberties Union has joined the atomic scientists in protesting the censorship regulations imposed by the Atomic Energy Commission on discussion of thermo-nuclear reactions—that is, the hydrogen bomb program. The AEC has asked all its employes and all the employes of universities and industrial corporations who have access to restricted data under contracts with the commission to refrain from publishing even nonclassified information about the program. The ban was given somewhat melodramatic application recently when the magazine Scientific American was required to destroy 3000 copies of an issue already on the presses which contained, in an article by Dr. Hans Bethe, a few sentences deemed dangerous by the AEC. It was not suggested that the offending sentences disclosed any restricted data; their offense lay wholly in a fear that special significance might be attached to the ideas of Dr. Bethe, an outstanding authority on thermo-nuclear reactions, because he is a commission consultant.

In other words, as the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists put it, "It's not what's said, it's who says it." This is not a position that can fairly be dismissed as mere caprice on the part of the AEC. It is a familiar principle of security by concealment that special caution must be exercised in public statements by those who are known to possess special knowledge. We do not believe, therefore, that the solution suggested by the American Civil Liberties Union is a realistic one. The ACLU has suggested that "appropriate measures" be taken to assure the press and the public that "whatever an employe or contractor or consultant may say is not to be taken as reflecting the commission's thermo-nuclear program." Unfortunately, such an assurance would not always be accepted.

But a blanket gag by the AEC on all discussion by the persons best qualified to discuss the subject involves risks even greater than the risks involved in incautious comment. The risks in such a gag are twofold: one effect is to heighten the already considerable reluctance among scientists to work for the AEC—a serious handicap in maintaining American atomic supremacy, the only meaningful kind of security; another effect is to make the men working for the AEC unwilling to participate at all in the shaping of public policy concerning hydrogen bombs. What the nuclear physicists know, insofar as it is unclassified, and what they think as a result of their knowledge are indispensable to the kind of enlightened public discussion which is the foundation of self-government. We agree with the editorial position of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists:

> In this discussion, scientists who have the most complete knowledge of the facts, and the deepest understanding of the possibilities, have the right (and the duty) to participate, since they are best able to enlighten public opinion. The judgment they have shown so far does not justify apprehension that they will speak out too lightly or irresponsibly.

Divorce Needed

It is an often-proved maxim that the appearance of evil can be as harmful as the evil itself. That is the case in the unusual relationship between units of the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Cooperative Extension Service recently discussed in Congress. Although the Extension Service supposedly is a joint venture of the Department of Agriculture and the land-grant colleges providing education and training for farmers, in 11 States the Farm Bureau sponsors and participates in county extension work. This favoritism to a private farm pressure group, only one of the three major farm organizations, understandably causes resentment.

That is not to say that extension work has not benefited from Farm Bureau participation. However, that participation began when farm bureaus were nothing but local groups of farmers. Since then the Farm Bureau Federation has developed on State and national levels and has become a powerful lobby—often for constructive purposes, but still a pressure group. Yet in Illinois the Farm Bureau contributes nearly one million dollars yearly to the support of extension work; in Iowa more than half a million. Often the Farm Bureau pays the county extension agent's salary or furnishes him office space; it gets value received in that the agent keeps Farm Bureau records. Testimony has developed that in some areas county agents serve exclusive "rings" of farmers.

The Granger and Thomas bills now before Congress would prohibit payment of Federal funds for farm extension work to States which require or permit participation of farm organizations in extension work. This position has been indorsed strongly by the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities, and it seems to us sound. We have some reservations about other features of the bills: for example, though in theory there is a good argument for requiring States to match Federal extension funds completely, to insist on this immediately would be to work a hardship in some needy areas.

Similarly, the bills seem unduly severe in restricting activities of extension workers and in prohibiting acceptance of any nonpublic funds such as endowments; as Secretary Brannan suggests, these could be paid to the colleges and become public funds. We hope, however, that the major purpose of the bills—to divorce the extension service from the Farm Bureau—will become law. That would correct a bad case of favoritism in public policy, and it would leave the other work of the Farm Bureau a lot less vulnerable to attack.

More Gas For Britain

The ending of British gasoline rationing has been made possible by an agreement with two American oil companies to supply extra gasoline, take payment in sterling, and use it to buy British tankers and other equipment. Although this arrangement does not indicate that a solution of the dollar-sterling oil problem has been found, it does relieve the tension created by the tight restrictions recently imposed by Great Britain on sales of American oil. And it may preshadow the end of gasoline rationing in other parts of the sterling area that would open the way for increased consumption of the products of American-owned companies on similar terms.

While the end of rationing will necessitate some increases in dollar outlays for oil imports, Mr. Noel-Baker, Fuel and Power Minister, thinks the additional expenditure will be offset by dollar gains from the tourist trade. The treasury will also benefit from the increased tax revenue resulting from larger sales of gasoline, and the government will be able to propitiate the public by abandoning a highly unpopular restriction. Finally, it appears to be most unlikely that the end of rationing will result in any marked increase in gasoline consumption by the British public, as the tax has recently been doubled and gasoline now sells at 3 shillings a gallon. (A British gallon is one fifth larger than ours.) Such high prices limit motor travel almost as rigorously as government edicts. The chief difference is that the motorist in future will have the right to decide for himself how many miles he can afford to travel in his car instead of having the limit fixed by his government.

BALLAD OF THE TRAVELERS

Long the road to Bethlehem—
Travel-stained and weary,
To the Inn at last they came—
Joseph and Mary.

"Rest thee, travelers, where the fire Genial is and cheering!"
"Nay. Make ready me a bed,
My hour is nearing."

"Here is not one vacant room," Spoke mine host, "poor ladye—
Nothing save the manger." "There
Let me lie," sayed she.

When the Child was born, his cloke
Joseph spread for cover—
Ass and Ox for bodies' warmth,
Near the crib stood over.

Angels sang the holy birth,
But Bethlehem was sleeping—
No one waked! The kine it was,
Heard the Babe's first weeping!

Muscle-Flexing

During the week preceding Armed Forces Day, the people of the United States were barraged with a series of pompous, platitudinous, chauvinistic speeches such as we have in the past associated with totalitarian, militaristic countries, whether of the left or of the right. The "peace-loving" American people were informed that: (1) "We are left with no alternative than to assume that the fearful moment of final decision is at hand . . . there is nothing in the current international picture to justify the assumption that we shall not again be called upon to defend ourselves. (Navy Secretary Matthews.) (2) "There seem little prospect of a peace treaty, so we must maintain armed forces all over the world and we may have to occupy more countries before the cold war is ended." (Vice President Barkley, who later denied the question.) (3) That all the Russians understand is a "fist." (President Truman).

The writer is a pacifist and knows that not many of his fellows share his pacifist viewpoint nor his readiness to try new and nonviolent ways of resisting tyranny. But he also knows this: The American people and their leaders are in the process of terrorizing and tyrannizing themselves with their new military fervor and strength. Whatever their fears of Communist totalitarianism, and however justified, Americans are also aware that something is basically wrong and unsound about the new slogans offered to them by the little men who rattle their atom bombs.

If the people of the United States still feel the need of military might, let them at least insist that their leaders maintain some psychological balance and humility. This bellicose breast-beating and flexing of military muscles does not give a sense of security or of peaceful intentions to anybody—at home or abroad.

Louder "Voice"

Confronted as we are these days by distortion and manipulation, it is no longer quite accurate to say that facts speak for themselves. If they are to make themselves heard clearly and concisely, they require a mouthpiece. To a degree, we have been providing just that in our short-wave broadcasts known as "The Voice of America."

Admirable as is this program in so many ways, it still isn't as effective as it could and should be. When the British, despite straitened circumstances, find it possible to beam 11 hours daily of factual material to the Soviet Union, our own endeavors, consisting of a mere 7½ hours each day, appear meager, indeed. So skimpy a project certainly gives the impression of half-heartedness on our part.

Why have not larger appropriations been forthcoming? Chiefly, I presume, because of the difficulty of arriving at any dependable figure as to how many people actually listen to these broadcasts. Perhaps the most impressive showing can be cited for 1946, when with an information budget of $19,284,775, some 85,000 letters of foreign comment were reportedly received concerning our informational programs throughout the world. Not all responses were sympathetic to our viewpoint, but it seems likely that to our efforts can be attributed at least part of the credit for the success of moderate elements at the polls, both in France and in Italy.

With the much more rigorous surveillance now in effect behind the iron curtain, we can scarcely expect so direct or immediate a response to the current "Voice of America" endeavors. Should our efforts fail to keep pace with current needs, though, the relatively small dollar savings will furnish cold comfort. Unless we make a vigorous attempt to tell our own story abroad, others will do it for us—in a twisted form!

Southeast Asia Union

Congratulations to The Post for bringing into sharper focus the troubled waters of Asia, which indeed run deep. Contemporary Asia is undergoing a series of Caesarian births which it is hoped will produce the living babe of democratic self-government.

But while we await the ultimate realization of this objective it may be necessary to find a means to eradicte or curb that infectious germ, communism. Such a counterpoise is clearly available in the form of a proposed Southeast Asia Union. As I understand it, the Southeast Asia Union would be non-Communist rather than anti-Communist, but its real promise is that it would produce a third power group to eventually stabilize a world in which the two existing power groups are at each other's throats. Certainly, then, proposals for such a union warrant our most careful consideration.

Victims of Japan

Perhaps very few of your readers now realize that spread over this fair land are members of a forgotten group of people who suffered deprivation, starvation, brutality and other forms of misery during the late war, only because they were real Americans, and firm in their belief that they should protect along with their homes and businesses the rights and prestige of the United States in the Far East in defiance to the aggressor. They are the American civil internees imprisoned in China by the Japanese.

The writer happens to be one of that group and before hostilities was engaged in a flourishing business in Shanghai International Settlement under treaties of extra-territoriality, protected and governed by the United States, Great Britain and France. Until the war it was practically the center of all international commerce between these countries and China. The Japanese at the beginning of 1943 confiscated our property, business, bank accounts, etc., and with only what we could carry they herded us into the camps on starvation rations.

Now we are told by the War Claims Commission here that under the clauses of the reparations bill only the prisoner's at Guam, Wake, and the Philippines, are eligible to receive payment! Why are we discriminated against? S. J. S.

Controlling The Huks

I have been a political observer on Philippine-American affairs for more than a quarter of a century, most of which was spent in Washington. I see nothing in Mr. Candido Palting's letter of May 22 which resembles reality.

The Huks began life as a resistance movement against the Japanese. Soon after the liberation of the Philippines, the Headquarters of General MacArthur issued orders so that the members of this organization would turn in their guns and ammunition to responsible commanders of the AFWESPAC (Armed Forces of the Western Pacific), which they refused to do. Since then, this organization has stayed aloof from the government, has organized itself as an independent armed force and has been responsible for many crimes committed against persons and properties in the Philippines.

In the beginning, the government parleyed with Huk leaders with a view to attracting them to a life of law and order, but there soon came a time when it became evident that the Huks were not after agrarian reforms alone—which problem has been receiving attention and positive and courageous action on the part of the government since early in 1946—but were intent on wresting control of the government through force. It was also found that the leaders of this movement were indoctrinating the men directly under them in communistic doctrines to the extent of even establishing schools for the propagation of communistic ideas.

In view of this fact, the Government declared the organization an outlaw organization and started a campaign against it. Because of this campaign, these outlaws have escaped to the mountains and since then have been waging sporadic guerilla attacks not only against peaceful inhabitants but also against government forces in small villages and towns.

I wish to emphasize the fact that it is not true that the Huks are mere agrarian reformers. They are no doubt Communist led and their plan of campaign is Communist inspired and follows the definite pattern we see in China, Indo-China and in other areas of Southeast Asia now in ferment because of Communist activities. Furthermore, I wish to reiterate the statements of our government officials, including that of Senator Jose Avelino who, at the press conference at the Philippine Embassy the other day stated that it is not correct to state that lawlessness is widespread.

Neither is it correct to say that the Huks have widespread popular support. The peaceful inhabitants of the lowlands and the plains are against the Huks. If the Huks have succeeded in provisioning themselves with food and medicine, it has been at gunpoint. They have not succeeded on any occasion in controlling any community with an established government for any length of time. Even in Central Luzon, where the activities of this group have been most noticeable, the farmers with a few exceptions have been able to cultivate their lands and have withdrawn to the thickly populated towns only in the evenings or when the work on their farms permits them to do so.

It should be borne in mind in this conection that it is not easy to suppress guerilla bands. The government has to conduct a campaign of attrition against them, and in time they will be suppressed. At the same time, the Philippine government is implementing its program of agrarian reforms and is carrying out a modest industrialization plan with a view to removing whatever causes there might be for the Communist ideas to take root among our people. Contrary to what Mr. Palting and others may say, President Quirino's government is administering public affairs in the Philippines; and in spite of serious problems which it has had to face as an aftermath of the war, doing very well.

Matter of Fact

Behind Locked Doors: I

THERE IS good reason to believe that the American people are not being told what they have every right to know. No one suggests that technical secrets should be broadcast to the world. But in a democracy, great issues of national policy cannot be settled behind locked doors. There must be public debate on the answers to such vitally important questions as these:

Has it been decided not to engage in an all-out effort to make the hydrogen bomb?

Has it been decided virtually to abandon the effort to find ways of using atomic energy as a great new source of industrial power?

Has it been decided to abandon as impractical any serious attempt to organize an effective civil defense against atomic bombardment in time of war?

Because of the thick shroud of secrecy in which such matters are enveloped, it is impossible now to answer any of these questions positively. But certainly there are reasons for believing that the answer to all three questions is "yes."

The fact, recently reported in this space, that there are technical grounds for doubting that the hydrogen bomb is a good military investment has now been widely confirmed, especially in a remarkable article in the Scientific American, by Dr. Robert Bacher, physicist and former member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

BRIEFLY, there are reasons for believing that the hydrogen bomb, if it can be made at all, will yield a much smaller comparative return in terms of area destroyed than the number of atom bombs which could be produced with an equivalent investment. What is more important, hydrogen bombs require the same facilities, and the same uranium raw material, as atom bombs. Thus, to make hydrogen bombs and at the same time avoid a sharp cutback in atom bomb production, it might be necessary to build a counterpart of the billion-dollar Hanford reactor plant. It might even be necessary to build a counterpart of the Northwest Hydro-Electric Power System which feeds the Hanford plant.

No such investment is apparently even remotely contemplated. Moreover, the great scientists whose hideous magic brought forth the atom bomb are not working on the desperately difficult problem of making hydrogen bombs. This and other evidence clearly suggests that the United States is not now engaged in an all-out effort to produce the terrible new weapon.

For the reasons given above, this decision, if it has in fact been made, may be justified. But there is no justification for bamboozling the American people where such a life-and-death issue is concerned. Moreover, in a democracy a small group of officials simply cannot secretly assume responsibility for the appalling risk that the Soviets might perfect a weapon of total destruction before the United States.

The question of finding ways to use atomic energy as a source of industrial power may seem less dramatic. But it is in fact an issue of absolutely central importance. Consider a recent statement by former Atomic Energy Chairman David Lilienthal.

ONLY LAST March, Lilienthal said: "We must recognize as soon as possible the importance of the development of atomic energy as a new and vital branch of our industrial technology . . . We must get away from our dependence on coal and should begin to throw the energies of the country into the development of nuclear energy on a large scale."

Lilienthal should know what he is talking about. And what Lilienthal was talking about was a new source of industrial power which could transform the economy of this country.

Yet a few weeks after Lilienthal spoke, in a little-noted move, the Atomic Energy Commission abandoned its most important industrial power project, announcing that work would go forward instead on an atomic power plant for submarines. Since then acting Chairman Sumner Pike and other AEC officials, flatly contradicting Lilienthal, have publicly voiced great skepticism about the practical possibilities of using atomic power for industrial purposes.

On the basis of such evidence, knowledgeable observers strongly suspect that the AEC is now concentrating virtually all its resources on straight military objectives. In view of the world situation, this might be a wise decision. But again, the dangers are obvious. Assume that Lilienthal is right and nuclear energy is a great new potential source of power. Assume that the Soviet Union successfully develops this power source, while the United States neglects it. This alone could decisively alter the whole world power balance in the Soviet Union's favor.

The third and equally vital issue of civil defense must be left to a later report. Meanwhile, it is worth pondering the words of the brilliant physicist, Dr. Robert Oppenheimer: "It is a grave danger that these decisions are being taken on the basis of facts held secret . . . Wisdom itself cannot flourish, and even truth cannot be established, without the give and take of criticism and debate." Amen.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Governess Complex

Lippmann

THE SCHUMAN proposal has raised, as it was bound to, a delicate and difficult problem for Great Britain. The decision to make the offer was taken in Paris without consulting London or Washington. Though Britain is invited to become a member of the new coal and steel organization, the offer was addressed in the first instance to Germany, and it calls for direct Franco-German negotiations.

This French initiative to bring about a Franco-German partnership has aroused enthusiasm in Washington. But not in London. There it has had on the whole a frigid to hostile reception despite the fact that M. Bidault and M. Schuman have dared to do what nearly four years ago Mr. Churchill in his famous Zurich speech asked France and Germany to do:—to make an end to retribution, to bring about "a blessed act of oblivion," and as partners and because they are partners to make it possible for Europe to unite.

"THERE ARE," says the London Economist, "dangers of the political consequences of Franco-German unity being other than the enthusiasts hope." What are the dangers? "No one should underestimate the sense of defeatism and neutrality that exists in some parts of the continent," and the Economist is afraid that "the political aims behind the integration of French and German heavy industry are to lay the economic foundations for a separate European bloc, to 'withdraw Europe from the cold war,' and thus remove the shield of American interest and concern from a totally undefended and 'neutral' Europe."

In order to prevent all this, the Economist concludes that Britain ought to join the Schuman plan at once before France and Germany come to any understanding directly with each other. "For its (Britain's) presence on the new authority would insure, as could nothing else, that the political aims of the new organization were sound."

THIS IS a rather complicated and sophisticated conception of policy—that Britain should take charge of Franco-German relations in order that Europe should not withdraw from the United States and in order that the United States should be kept interested in Europe. It is not an attractive suggestion—this notion that it is the peculiar role of Britain to see to it that the French and Germans on the one hand, the Americans on the other, do not backslide into isolationism. The foreign editor of the Economist is, it seems to me, suffering from an unresolved governess complex. The negative role which he proposes for Britain will be viewed in Washington, in Paris, in Bonn against the background of Britain's indecision about its own positive responsibilities in Europe.

There is nothing in the record of British postwar diplomacy in Europe to make anyone feel that London is the soundest judge of what is good and what is not good European policy. Nor is there anything in the record of American postwar diplomacy to justify the insinuation that a Franco-German partnership in the interests of European unity would or could cause us "to remove the shield of American interest and concern." Quite the contrary. Nothing is so certain to insure a deep and enduring American interest and concern in Europe as actions, like the French offer, which originate in Europe and prove the vitality of Europe.

The one certain way to turn Americans away from Europe is to make them feel that Europe is hopelessly divided, incurably weak, and that it has lost the instinct to survive, the will to live, and the determination to be free and independent. Americans have always known that Europe can be saved only by the Europeans, and they have realized that if Europe had to be managed and saved from London or Washington, Europe would be past saving. That is why they have regarded the Marshall Plan and military aid as limited, not permanent arrangements insofar as they make the receiving nations our clients.

And so the Schuman offer, far from promoting the isolationist tendency in America, has been a most powerful counteracting force.

NOR WILL it be easy to persuade us that the epoch-making act of bringing to an end the Franco-German conflict is a symptom of that "sense of defeatism and neutrality" which has been rising all over Europe. In American eyes it is not defeatist to bring to an end a conflict which has all but ruined Europe. In American eyes it is defeatist to be afraid of Franco-German unity and to work oneself into the state of mind of the foreign editor of the Economist, who seems to think that nobody outside the British Isles can be trusted if he acts independently, who is full of apprehension and foreboding about any action which is not initiated and supervised from Whitehall.

And as for that "sense of neutrality,"—let us beware of thinking that any manifestation of independence on the continent, any tendency to question the perfect wisdom of all that is decided in Washington or in London, is appeasement, isolationism and non-resistance. In the Soviet orbit "national deviationism" is a high crime. But in the free world we call it national independence, and we do not demean ourselves—except when we forget our true faith—into demanding that all who share our ultimate aims must also believe that the road we take is the only road there is.

2 Major Decisions Expected From Supreme Court Soon

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court is expected shortly to hand down the most important decisions of the 1949-50 term now drawing to a close.

Top decisions awaiting announcement involve the tidelands oil dispute between the Federal Government and the States of Texas and Louisiana, and three important rulings on segregation.

Either or both could come at today's Court session. The court already has announced it hopes to quit a week from today although Chief Justice Vinson indicated in a recent speech it may take a bit longer to finish up the term's business.

In the tidelands cases, the Government has asked the court to declare that it, rather than the States, has "paramount" rights in the oil-rich areas offshore in the Gulf of Mexico (actually they are areas beyond the tidal waters).

An offshoot of the tidelands arguments is the request by former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes that the court investigate agreements made by the Government and the State of California with private oil firms to continue operations in the offshore areas of the Pacific.

Ickes, in a petition to the Court, asserted that the action was "an attempt to strike down the opinion of this Court and cause it to be null and void." The Court was asked to order all parties to the California agreement to show why the agreements "should not be set aside as inconsistent with and contrary to the decision of the Court."

The agreement was negotiated, the Government contended, because of the lack of a Federal law permitting it to take over administration of the leases. The dominant sentiment in Congress has favored and still favors turning over the oil-bearing areas to the States on an income-splitting arrangement. So far no compromise has been reached. If the Court should decide in the Texas and Louisiana cases that the Government has the same "paramount" rights as it does in California, a new attempt to reach a legislative agreement is expected.

The three segregation cases concern a railroad dining car and segregation of varying degrees in the graduate schools of Texas and Oklahoma Universities. In all three cases, the Federal Government has asked the Court to strike down the ancient doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities for Negro and white schools.

Another important case involves the right of any person, citizen or alien, to test the legality of his detention by American officials anywhere in the world. The question revolves around the right to bring a habeas corpus action in a Federal Court, usually in the District, against the Government official having jurisdiction over the overseas jailer. The problem has grown out of America's new activities around the world and is separate from the problem of actions by international courts on which Americans sit, among others.

A late addition to cases under consideration is the deportation proceedings against Mrs. Ellen Knauff, the German-born war bride. The Justice Department seeks to keep her from remaining here but Justice Jackson two weeks ago granted a stay so the Court could consider the case. The Court likely will rule before the term ends on whether or not to consider her appeal from a lower court ruling.

Men's Clothing Stores Show Sales Drop of 8 Percent

By The Associated Press

Men's clothing stores showed a drop of about 8 percent in dollar sales last year, the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers reported today.

Operating expenses continued to rise slightly, the association said, while profit markups remained steady. "The result is a drop in percentage of net profit," the report said.

The survey showed that 89.5 percent of all men's and boys' clothing stores had lower dollar sales in 1949 than in the preceding year.

More goods were sold at marked down prices. Mark down sales accounted for 6.09 percent of all business, as against 5 percent in "normal merchandising conditions."

"A growing price stability and intelligent merchandising should work against further increase in mark downs during the current year," the association said.

Tobin's Appeal in GE Election Puts NLRB, Himself on Spot

Fitzgerald last fall, when the U. E. was still in the CIO. Fitzgerald was also a member of the Lynn local, and put on a terrific campaign in hopes of winning the big local over to the left-wing U. E.

Another right-wing leader, John Callahan, of Pittsfield, Mass., also asked Secretary Tobin to help the IUE in Lynn. Both Kelley and Callahan had been strong supporters of Tobin in his successful Massachusetts gubernatorial campaigns.

Although Tobin has a large following in the Bay State, especially among union workers, there appears to be a division of opinion as to how much influence he had in the Lynn elections.

Left-wing UE supporters insist that Tobin's plug—backed up by the prestige of his office—turned the tide in favor of the IUE. On the other hand, some IUE backers wonder aloud—but in private—if perhaps the Cabinet officer's speech did not backfire and swing some votes away from the IUE to UE.

It's an academic point whether or not Tobin's speech helped or hindered the right-wing IUE campaign.

But there's nothing academic about the CIO-IUE winning control of Lynn's 17,000 General Electric employes by a small plurality. There's nothing academic about the $100,000 in dues, collected by the company and help in escrow for the winner of the election.

The issue is very real for the NLRB. The board has always been zealous in seeking to run free elections on the matter of union representation. It has in the past thrown out scores of elections on the grounds of interference by employer or union, and even when a NLRB agent has in some way interfered with the election.

But never before has the NLRB been faced with the charge of "Government interference."

No matter what the board finally decides in the case, it's bound to prove embarrassing to the board, to the Labor Secretary, and to the Administration.

Long Session Is Indicated

weeks to follow in conference.

Somewhere in between, Majority Leader Lucas is pledged to work in another attempt to break a filibuster on the Fair Employment Practices bill. Lack of 64 clear votes for cloture foredooms the attempt, but it will be made nonetheless "for the record."

Other Hurdles Ahead

Here are some of the other more imposing measures the Senate will be held here to pass:

The House-approved draft bill, rent control extension, authority for another year of Atlantic Pact military assistance, appropriations for both MAP and ECA, expiring rubber and tin control acts and, last but not least, a veto-threatened tax bill which hasn't even cleared the House Ways and Means Committee.

As campaign time nears, more and more Senators are taking French leave, making quorums harder to get and adding absenteeism to the Administration's session-end woes. On last week's important ECA test, for example, 21 Senators were absent. As the session strings out, the absentee figures will climb.

Leaders May Be Absent

In fact, if the session extends well into August the Administration's own Senate leadership may have to turn over the driver's seat temporarily to colleagues not afflicted with election year troubles.

Both Senate Majority Leader Lucas and Senate Majority Whip Francis Myers have more than their share of it. Lucas is opposed for reelection by the GOP's always hard-hitting Everett M. Dirksen while Myers' Republican bad news is Pennsylvania's James H. Duff.

Friends are advising both not to campaign in absentia but to leave the Senate to its closing foibles if necessary to meet their opponents on the stump.

Ben Hogan, Gene Sarazen and Lew Worsham will be among the famous golfers at The Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament PLUS stars like Danny Kaye, Arthur Godfrey and Milton Berle. See them at the Bob Hope Show too.

Lie Again Hurled at McCarthy In Reply by State Department viewing developments throughout the Far East, said the obvious conclusion was that "there is a new day which has dawned in Asia."

As for Lattimore, the department said it has denied repeatedly that the Baltimore professor is a State Department employe or that he is the "architect" of Far Eastern policy.

It also challenged McCarthy's assertion that Lattimore ordered the firing of three "pro-Chiang Kai-shek employes" of the wartime Office of War Information.

It said McCarthy originally began his attacks on the department by saying there are 205 Communists among its employes, and now "appears to be reduced" to an attempt to divert attention by citing the case of "two Chinese."

"To date, Senator McCarthy has utterly failed to prove that there is a single Communist or pro-Communist in the State Department," it added.

It also took up McCarthy's claim that Jessup supervised a publication of the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations when it received $6500 in "Communist money."

McCarthy has said that millionaire Frederick Vanderbilt Field was a contributor to the organization.

The department replied that about half of the institute's budget was met by the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Corp., and that Field's contributions were only a "drop in the bucket."

Furthermore, it said, the institute's committee on financial support included both Field and Alfred Kohlberg, "the New York importer who has admittedly been one of Senator McCarthy's principle sources of information.

Taft Says Tydings Unit Falls Short in Inquiry

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday said a special Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee has failed to conduct a "complete investigation" of Senator McCarthy's charges of communism in the State Department.

Taft was asked on the "Meet the Press" television show what he thought of the Wisconsin Republican's allegations and the investigation of them by the subcommittee headed by Senator Tydings (D., Md.).

"There is a prima facie case arising out of the [Alger] Hiss conviction, the [Julian] Wadleigh confession, the Amerasia case and Secretary [Charles] Sawyer's request for [William W.] Remington and [Michael] Lee to quit," he said.

Taft said he has "no way of knowing whether the McCarthy charges are right or not." He said that McCarthy "never asked my advice and I never advised him."

"There ought to be a complete investigation," he said. "I don't think the Tydings committee has done it."

was ruined. The invading Japs killed off the Caribou and oxen the people used for raising and transporting their food. They were left nothing to farm with. Diseases among livestock, such as rinderpest in cattle, raged unchecked during the war, and wiped out all herds in many areas.

Nobody in these countries got the small necessities of life such as cloth, shoes, pots and pans during the war, and they still aren't getting them, Dodd said.

"I have seen families with only one sheet among them. When one member went to town or away from home, he wore the sheet. The rest stayed at home naked, without a thing to wrap in.

"Prices have gone up so that hunger is a daily acquaintance with millions. It was hard enough at any time for people whose income is only a few cents a day."

Adding to the troubles of Asia is the fighting over the partition between Pakistan and India. Pakistan has food, Dodd said, and India needs it. But instead of shipping it a few miles from Pakistan, India buys from Australia and other exporters, and then ships it hundreds of miles overland in India. The average worker in India earns 10 to 12 cents a day, he added.

"We talk about the war being over," Dodd said. "But there is no peace now in the Far East. Actual warfare is going on everywhere."

One country Dodd described as remarkable for its resources and opportunities is Ethiopia. He spent several days with Haile Selassie, and then flew in Selassie's plane to South Africa.

Gas Rationing End To Cost 2200 Jobs

London, May 28 (U.P.).—The Daily Herald, official newspaper of the Labor Party, broke the news as gently as it could that 2200 civil servants would lose their jobs as result of the end of gasoline rationing in Britain.

"Rationing's end," the Herald said, "means . . . about 2000 temporary and 200 permanent civil servants will be freed for other work."

D. C. Pilgrims Marvel at Majestic Swiss Alps, See Famed Passion Play at Oberammergau

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, public relations assistant at Hamilton National Bank, is hostess for over 200 Washingtonians now touring Europe following their Holy Year Pilgrimage to Rome. From time to time she is reporting to The Washington Post. In the following letter she writes of visiting the Swiss Alps and attendance at the Oberammergau Passion Play.

Oberammergau,
Monday, May 22.

Dear Reader:

The first scenic spot on our train ride into Switzerland was placid Lake Como. Surrounded by high mountains, the setting fully merits the praise written of it.

The few hours it took us after leaving busy Milan roduced a tremendous transition. For now we saw the Swiss Alps in all their snowcapped majesty and many waterfalls, some reminiscent of Yosemite's "Bridal Veil."

We reached Lucerne at 5 p. m., stopping at the Hotel Europe. Our balcony looked out on blue Lake Lucerne, the Alps in the background. What more could one ask?

Closed on Ascension Day

After dinner, we all descended on the stores, for we knew they would be closed on Thursday (Ascension Day), a Catholic holiday. This being the country for watches, we saw a number of attractive ones being displayed by some of our pilgrims. Among the purchasers were Ann Hurley, Mae Hickey, Margaret Herrity, Rita Werner, Priscilla Cutler and Mrs. A. A. Martufi. Eva Kuchesky bought a service plate that plays melodies as it is passed around.

Thursday, after attending Mass at the Cathedral of Lucerne, we went sightseeing. Our first stop was the Panorama, a circus-tent-shaped permanent building. It houses a 14,000-foot painting of incidents in the Franco-Prussian War. This circular masterpiece is so lifelike that it looks as if the soldiers are walking through the snow.

Next came the famous monument of the Lion of Lucerne. The many pictures I have seen of it did not prepare me for a 200-foot rock in a natural setting, with a pool at its base and the majestic lion carved in a niche in the center. It was completed in 1821, as a tribute to the 726 officers and men of the Swiss Army who died assisting the French in the war of 1792. Its beauty deserves its fame.

Most Unusual Bridge

The "Dead Ends of Life" bridge is most unusual. It is wooden, was built in 1408, and the motifs of its roof-beams is that of life's briefness. Incidents in the life of Wilhelm Tell are depicted on the facade of a nearby building.

We had to change our language when we arrived here since German is spoken with a Swiss dialect. However, most of the natives speak English. The children are healthy, rosy-cheeked and happy-faced.

On a short ride into the countryside we went along the road where Queen Astrid of the Belgians was killed in a motor accident in 1935.

Wonderful Yodeling

That evening, following the recommendation of our head waiter, some of us went to the Stadtkeller near the Schwasenklatz to hear yodeling. It was wonderful!

There was a five-piece orchestra playing lively Swiss melodies, and a buxom lass in native costume who, we are told, is the best yodeler in all Switzerland. Those at our table, with tall, cold steins, were Mary Nolz, Nellie Gross, Velma and Dorothy Ryan, Pauline and Doris Pigeon, Eva Kuchesky and Mae Hickey. Others nearby were Kitty Cissell, Ruth Poirier, Jane and Margaret Herrity, Mike Halloren, Bill Nolan, Edith Cross and Carolyn Ballman.

On Friday afternoon we took a glorious bus trip to Engelberg, 3000 feet up. Then we went 3000 feet higher by two different types of finicular railways. At the top some of us got sunburned during a snowball battle.

When we returned to the 3000-foot level, we visited the Benedictine Monastery of Engelberg, which was built in 1220.

In the evening your correspondent went back again to the Stadtkeller to hear more of that enthalling Swiss music. In the group were Annamae Holbrook and her father.

We remained until the orchestra stopped at 11 p. m., then strolled back along the shore of the lake under flowering horse chestnut trees. Across the water we could see many flickering lights on the Alps, and there was a moon!

In bed at 1 a. m. and up at 5 a. m. to leave at 6:45 for Oberammergau. We entered the French zone of Austria at 11 a. m. and had lunch at the Hotel Weisses Kreuz in Bregenz. We had to pass through several barriers, make out various money declarations and at one place the officer actually counted the money in my wallet and my traveler's cheques. Once we sang the Star Spangled Banner for them and they recognized it.

We saw many crucifix shrines along the roadside. The figures are generally gold or silver.

Like a Carnival Town

The tiny village of Oberammergua, nestled in the Bavarian Alps, came into view about 5 p. m. When we stopped in the square, where many buses were discharging passengers, it was like a carnival town full of noise and confusion.

Lillian Worden and I were billeted at the home of Max Schauer, an architect who plays the cello in the Passion Play orchestra. They live on the principal street and have four lovely children.

Some of our people were fortunate in staying at the Lang home, where Anton Lang, the famous Christus of former plays, once lived. Staying there were Fathers Raymond H. Bohru and P. G. Maguire, Sister Mary Jerome, Mrs. Frank Pipitone, Edith Cross, Dorothy Leuthy, Clara Ziebarth, Margaret Davoreu, Georgia Moss and Ann Streiter.

I met Mother Lang and she was pleased to hear that some of us know her son, Dr. Anton Lang of Washington.

Sunday morning we went to the Cathedral for 6 o'clock Mass and stayed for the High Mass. The choir of local people poured out their hearts into their glorious singing. At 8 a. m. we were in our seats for the famous Passion Play, fortified with pillows for the two four-hour sessions. We were in the center of the huge auditorium. The stage is permanent but there is no roof and you feel the Alps are the backdrops. I shall not attempt to describe the play—you know it—but through the 16 acts and 20 living tableaux you felt you were really in Jerusalem witnessing the actual happenings.

At the luncheon intermission, when we introduced ourselves around the table, I was surprised and delighted to find that next to me was Daniel Gagon, not only a Washingtonian but a customer of the Hamilton National Bank! Small world.

In the evening we strolled around town, admiring the beautiful wood carvings in the shops. We made several purchases and had refreshments at a sidewalk cafe with some English acquaintances. We joshed each other about our pronunciations.

Today (May 22) we went into the nearby mountains to see a small but sumptuous palace built for King Ludwig II of Bavaria in 1869. The rooms seemed weighed down with gold and silver decorations. On the grounds are the subterranean Grotto of Venus and a Moorish kiosk, the latter containing many unusual treasures.

We leave for Munich in the morning. —KATHRYN.

Reece, Other Dixie Republicans Angrily Reply to Scott's 'Sellout' Charges

Indignant Southern Republicans lashed out yesterday at Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr. (R., Pa.), for his accusation that they had sold out their party for "patronage and power."

Three of the six Republican leaders assailed by Scott asserted his attack was prompted by their successful efforts earlier this year to oust him as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

One—R. B. Creager, National Committeeman from Texas—said "I am surprised that Scott showed himself so little and so vicious."

Scott made his "sellout" charges against the party's National Committeemen from Tennessee, Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina during a radio interview Saturday night.

Chief among his targets was B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee, also a former National Committee chairman and senatorial candidate in 1948. Scott accused Reece of having a political alliance with Edward H. Crump, boss of the Democratic machine in Memphis.

Reece expressed strong indignation about the attack coming from within the party because he currently is engaged in a primary contest for the House seat of Representative Dayton E. Phillips, Republican from Tennessee's First Congressional District.

"I naturally do not presume Mr. Scott feels too kindly toward me for having helped in his ouster in order to install a capable chairman of the National Committee who I thought would lead the party to another victory this year," Reece said. "Mr. Scott led the Republicans to a Waterloo in 1948 largely because the issue was not drawn between the New Deal, whose reckless expenditures have brought this country to the brink of disaster, and sound government."

As for any association with the Crump machine, Reece asserted that anyone with "knowledge of the situation knows such a charge is false." He said he has spoken to Crump only once in his life and that was when both were members of the House of Representatives.

Creager, Reece and John E. Jackson, Louisiana National Committeeman, all attributed the Scott attack to their activity in the campaign which resulted in the election of Guy George Gabrielson, of New Jersey, to the committee chairmanship.

Ex-Bosox Lead Nats to 7 to 6 Victory Over Bosox

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

HERE 'TIS, Celebrity time again this weekend, coast-to-coast, they're converging on Washington to hack away at golf balls and juvenile delinquency. It's an all-expense tour in the sense they're paying all their own expense.

They're doing it because every dime that comes in at the gate will put a bat, a ball or a golf club in the hands of some kid in the alleys who otherwise might be cooking up a little trouble for himself or the cops, maybe.

POVICH

Former Attorney General Tom Clark who commissioned The Washington Post to launch these Celebrity Tournaments four years ago, had the kids in mind when he said then: "In the experience of the Department of Justice we know any boy would rather steal second base than steal a car."

His successor, Cabinet Officer J. Howard McGrath, is giving his eager blessings to the renewal of the tournament. He'll be there on the first tee at the Army-Navy Country Club on Saturday morning. In fact, almost everybody who is anybody of importance will be there.

WHO ARE THESE CELEBS, and how do you get to be one? There's no set course, laddies. Just get yourself a Cabinet job like Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder did, and tell 150 million persons how much of their tax money you need. You'll get an invitation to play in the Celebrities tournament.

Or if you're not finance-minded, get your paratroopers surrounded by Germans in the Bulge and when the Nazis ask you to surrender, tell 'em "Nuts, exclamation mark" like Gen. Tony McAuliffe did. They'll ask you into the tournament.

Oh, there are a hundred ways to be a Celeb. So simply get on the radio, coast-to-coast like Harry Wismer and they'll ask you to be the master of ceremonies at the first tee. Or be the most listened-to man in the world, like Arthur Godfrey, and you're in like Flynn. Or be the most looked-at like Milton Berle. He'll be on that first tee Saturday.

No talent for show business? Then buy yourself a world champion ball team like Yankee Owner Del Webb did, and be the house guest of presidents. Mr. Webb's in.

In fact you don't need a champion ball club. Just get a contender as did Spike Briggs of the Tigers. You're in.

OR SIMPLY GET national distribution for your stuff and write about these famous people and you get to be famous yourself like Walter Winchell and Bob Considine and Drew Pearson and Leonard Lyons. They'll be teeing off on Saturday morning, with the rest of the Celebs.

Lacking that talent, merely set the record for medal play in a national tournament or go to the semifinals in the British Amateur as Jim McHale, of Philadelphia did this week. You're in. Or get to be the proprietor of New York's most famous restaurant, like Toots Shor is.

There are other ways to get a tournament invitation. Get yourself elected to the Senate from Illinois like Scott Lucas did, and then get to be Majority Leader, the man President Truman leans on. They can't keep you out of the Celebs event.

Celebrity fame is co-ed. Grow up to be the world's greatest girl athlete like Babe Didrikson, or stand the golf world on its ear when you're 16 like Marlene Bauer. Win all the world's tennis titles like Pauline Betz Addie and then marry a sportswriter. You're accepted as a Celeb.

NO GOLFING SKILL like Ben Hogan and George Fazio, or Chick Evans? Don't be distressed. Simply get yourself a horse track like Harry Parr, the Maryland Jockey Club president, or perhaps, easier yet, just one horse like Christopher (Hill Prince) Chenery that can win the Preakness. Fame'll come your way.

You can author a plan and become famous like Secretary Brannan of Agriculture, or rule the world of billiards for two generations like Willie Hoppe. Or get to be the boss of the Air Forces and history's handsomest flying general like Hoyt Vandenberg.

Politics-minded? A short cut to the Celebs Tournament was George Smathers' technique. All he did was knock off Mr. Pepper in the Florida primaries and get elected to the United States Senate. Do that, and they'll consider you a Celebrity.

Just sign with the Redskins like Bill Dudley did, and you're kind of famous. Or don't sign like Charlie Justic and you're still famous although it helps to be the kind of guy Justice was in college. Creative-minded? Just think up a character like Joe Palooka and start drawing for the papers. That's how Ham Fisher got in.

ACTION AT HOT CORNER—Al Kozar kicks up a cloud of dust in the fourth inning yesterday sliding by Johnny Pesky and into third base. No. 53 is George Myatt, the Nats' demonstrative third base coach, who's practically sliding into the base himself as he instructs Kozar to hit the dirt. Nats won, 7-6

Snead Wins Colonial Golf With 73-277

Fort Worth, Tex., May 28 (AP).—Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., golf's leading man, added another trophy to his bulging collection today as he snapped up a $3000 check for winning the $15,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament. He finished with 277 for the 72 holes—three under par.

The top runner in everything pro golf has to offer—most money won, most Ryder Cup points and top contention for the Vardon Trophy—shot a three-over-par 73 over Colonial Country Club's troublesome 7035 yards in the final round today.

Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., closed out with a 70 to win second money of $2000 with a 72-hole total of 280. Tigers Take Doubleheader From Browns

St. Louis, May 28 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers racked up two victories at the expense of the St. Louis Browns today, rolling to an easy 6-to-2 triumph in the opener of their double-header and nosing out the Brownies 2 to 1 in the second game.

In the opener the Tigers were aided by Vic Wertz's homer with one on and three Brownie errors. Fred Hutchinson gave up nine hits for Detroit. Wertz's blow was in the first frame. He also singled twice in his five trips.

Dodgers Lose Game, Lead

Boston, May 28 (AP).—Bob Elliott and Warren Spahn proved a most effective Boston combination today as the Braves fashioned a 4-1 victory over Brooklyn, taking the odd game of a three-contest series from the Dodgers.

The loss dropped the Dodgers into second place in the National League behind the Phillies.

A cheering throng of 18,919 braved a bitting east wind as Elliott sent all Boston runs across the plate, two on his seventh homer of the season, and the left-handed Spahn gave up only five hits for his sixth decision.

The Brooks scored their lone run in the fourth, the only inning in which they could make more than one hit.

Mele Drives In 4 Runs, Harris Halts Rally in 9th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats found a winning hand in the discards yesterday. The Red Sox were licked, 7 to 6, by two of their own cast-offs, Sam Mele and Mickey Harris, a potent pair in the blue-chip stages of the ball game.

Mele, flecked from the Red Sox roster last season like extraneous matter on the lapels of the proper Bostonians, whacked in four of the Washington runs including the highly-important last one.

And when the Red Sox put the tying and winning runs on base against the faltering Sid Hudson in the ninth with one out, Bucky Harris fetched former Red Sox Mickey Harris from the bullpen. Six pitches later, Harris had both Ted Williams and Vern Stephens out.

Mele Socks 3-Run Triple

Back in the first inning, Mele banged in three runs for the Nats with a bases-full triple but the 12,288 customers were even more fond of him in the seventh. That was when he unlocked a 6-6 tie with the winning hit.

Ed Stewart beat out an infield single with one out in that seventh, and with two out, Mele gave him the hit-and-run sign. Mele belted a tremendous single into right center and Stewart, already in high gear, secored all the way from first base.

Out of their mere five hits off Mickey McDermott and his successor, Schantz, the Nats were getting a lot of mileage. The Red Sox accumulated 11 hits off Hudson, who was alternately luckless and charmed.

In Comes Harris

For the Nats it was a sort of distressing situation in that ninth when DiMaggio singled to center with one out and Pesky Drew Hudson's second walk of the game. With Ted Williams and Vern Stephens beginning to crowd the plate, Bucky Harris ran out of patience with Hudson.

Mickey Harris eased the tension almost immediately though by whipping two called strikes across against Williams. Then he got rid of him on a slow hopper to Robinson. But on the play, both runners moved into scoring position.

Now it was Stephens who confronted Harris, and he swung on a 1-1 pitch. He hit what can be described—if you are a Washington fan—as a gorgeous two-hopper to Sam Dante, and the Nats had the ball game.

For most of the game it was a duel between Hudson and little Dom DiMaggio who was continually in the hair of the Nats' big right-hander bent on winning his sixth of the season. DiMag, with a

Walcott Beats Ten Hoff

Mannheim, Germany, May 28 (AP).—Thirty-six-year-old Jersey Joe Walcott outpointed German heavyweight champion Hein Ten Hoff in 10 rounds before a rain-spattered crowd of 25,000.

Ten Hoff made a closer fight than expected against the Camden, N. J., Negro. Walcott entered the ring a 2 to 1 betting favorite, with a knockout freely predicted.

The previously-undefeated German used his tremendous reach to hold off Walcott with left jabs but hardly ever connected with rights.

Jersey Joe broke Ten Hoff's nose in the first round and had him bleeding throughout the fight. He kept Ten Hoff on the run with hard rights and looping lefts.

Neither man hit hard enough for a knockdown, but the slippery footing sent both to the canvas several times.

Page Hero, Goat as Yanks Beat Macks, 6-3, Lose 6-5

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP).—Lefty Joe Page was both hero and goat for the New York Yankees today as the American League leaders split a doubleheader with the Philadelphia Athletics, winning the opener, 6 to 3, and dropping the nightcap, 6 to 5.

Page—the Yankees' premier relief pitcher—came on to protect a lead for starter Vic Raschi through the last two innings of the first game and then was blasted for two home runs by Pinch-hitter Bill Hitchcock and Bob Dillinger—to blow a three-run lead in the nightcap.

That second game, which gave the A's a split in the four-game series, was called after six and one-half innings because of the Pennsylvania Sunday curfew law, which forbids play after 6:59 p. m., local time.

Alex Kellner came in to preserve the lead in the final inning, and did so nobly, striking out Joe DiMaggio and Billy Johnson although two runners reached base.

The victory, however, went to Carl Scheib, his first of the season after three losses.

Page pitched brilliantly in the opener, entering the game after Raschi was lifted for a pinch hitter during an eighth inning rally that gave the Yanks a 4-3 margin over the Athletics. The Yanks pushed across two more runs in the ninth to sew up that game.

Dillinger was a minor sensation

Wilson and Gardner Win 4-Ball Again

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

The old rabbit's foot continued to work yesterday for Cols. Jim Wilson of Army Navy and Jim Gardner of Washington as they defeated Mike Jankowski and Bob Chandler of Prince Georges, 1 up, to retain their Belle Haven Invitation Four Ball championship.

It was the first time the title has been defended successfully.

Typical of the match was the ninth hole. Jankowski holed a 30-foot putt for a par-3, but Wilson promptly holed a 27-footer to rack up a deuce. Wilson also holed a 15-foot putt on the 18th to close out Jankowski and Chandler.

Wilson and Gardner got into the championship flight by a bit of good luck on qualifying day. They shot a 69, marginal score between the first and second flights, and got into the top bracket by winning the draw.

In the semifinals Jankowski and Chandler were extended to the utmost to defeat Frank Heyer and Ben Schriever of Bell Haven, 1 up in 22 holes. Gardner and Wilson defeated Edgie Johnson and Jim Gipe of Prince Georges 5 and 4 in their next to last match.

Wilmington Handicap Tops Delaware's Opening Today

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, Del., May 28.—The $10,000 Wilmington Handicap, perennial test for sprinters, will feature tomorrow's opening program of the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association. Not only has this track kept up the added money on the Wilmington but, contrary to the general trend of racing throughout the country, has enlarged its stake schedule, upping purses in special events.

The first feature is at six furlongs and has attracted a field of 10 prominent members of the sprint set. Highweight and the probable favorite is Fred W. Hooper's Olympia, carrying 130 pounds. Olympia disappointed as a favorite in the Kentucky Derby last year but since has earned quite a reputation in his division.

Others in the Wilmington field are: Dixiana's Fleeting Star, 116; Brookfield Fars' Istan, 115; Maine Chance Farm's Royal Blood, 113; Mrs. James McGee's Little Harp, 112; E. A. Nicodemus' Laran, 111; William G. Helis' Dan Herst, 109; C. Mahlon Kline's Slam Bang, 108 and the Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark tandem of Tea-Maker, 111 and Alfoxie, 108 pounds.

Olympia with Eddie Arcaro up may break or threaten Winter Wheat's track record of 1:10 1-5. In his most recent endaavor, Olympia raced down the Widener course at Belmont Park in 1:09 flat to win the Roseben Handicap to beat Wine List and Royal Governor. The latter won last year's running of the Wilmington and is a rather surprising absentee this season.

Olympia in winning the Roseben, brought his seasonal record to four victories in nine starts and increased his earnings to $60,425, a figure which is still well below his three-year-old bank account of $236,700. His other stake victories this season came in the Pamonok and Camden Handicaps.

Sea Puss Wins First Title In Oxon Hill Horse Show

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Charles Carrico's Sea Puss from his Bradley Farm Stables in Potomac, Md., scored 13 points yesterday for the youngster's first championship in a hunter division at the first outing of the Oxon Hill Volunteer Fire Department held on Z. Vance Hick's natural amphitheater show ring setting at Oxon Hill.

Sea Puss was ridden by his veteran showman-owner to four first places and a second for his efforts in five classes, which sent the good-looking colt to tri-color brackets.

C. N. France's Timbrooke, also a resident of the Carrico barn, finished in the reserve limelight for hunter honors with a nice win in the open hunters and a fourth in the sweepstake class for a six-point tally.

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Delaware.

Washington fans will have their choice of two brands of racing on Monday with Delaware Park opening against the Rosecroft trots. Starting Tuesday, Hagerstown also will compete for the Capital City turf dough. Some hardy customers probably will take in the runners in the daytime and the troters at night, and look for a live card or dice game in between times. Delaware is ready to take its chances and for the reason that it finally opens without opposition from Charles Town. The West Virginia track annual has taken from $75,000 to $90,000 in daily play away from the Dupont oval. This year, Charles Town conflicts, but only for three days, from July 1 to July 4. Hagerstown also draws from Washington, but depends mostly on Western Maryland for its patronage. See you on the rail.—Bill.

Bosox Beaten By Jayvees (Nats)

twolbagger and two triples figured in all of the first five Boston runs.

He opened the game with a double to right, and scored immediately on Pesky's single past Kozar. Stephens followed with a single that Mele bobbled and with men on first and third and one out, Hudson was blessed on his next pitch. It was a fearline ling drive into Robinson's mitt by Dropo—double play.

Young McDermott invited the four-run disaster that befell him in the first inning by loading the bases with three walks, with one out. Then it was that Mele whacked a 3-2 pitch into the left corner to score everybody. He trotted home later on Oritz's fly ball.

DiMaggio bobbed up a trouble maker for Hudson in the third when he tripled to center behind McDermott's single and later scored on an infield out. It wasn't all Hudson's fault. Out in center field, Mele misjudged DiMag's drive.

The Nats got those two runs back in the fourth, cheaply. Kozar opened with a single, McDermott walked Evans, and Hudson beat out a smart bunt down the third baseline to fill 'em up. That was the last seen of McDermott. Schantz moved in and walked Yost to force over a run. A second run scored while Dente was hitting into a double play.

Dente's fumble on Schanz's grounder put Hudson in trouble in the fifth, and the pesky DiMaggio immediately increased it with a triple to right center. Pesky's fly scored DiMaggio, and the Nats lead was narrowed to 6-5.

Vern Stephens set the tying run in motion for the Sox by opening the sixth with a triple to left. He scored on Dropo's fiery single through the box. But Hudson, with none out, limited the damage to that one run.

The Nats were having a tough time of it against Schantz, who pitched two-hit ball after relieving McDermott in the fourth. Schantz's tough luck was that those two hits—Stewart's and Mele's—in the seventh, licked him.

The Red Sox had no luck in the elghth, though Hudson did. Dropo opened up with a single to right that put the tying run on, and then Wright bashed a murderous line-drive toward right field only to see it thump into Robinson's mitt, waist-high, for a double play. Goodman's single that followed was wasted. In fact, so was the Red Sox's whole afternoon.

IN SHORT . . . Ed Stewart, ejected from the game the night before for throwing his bat, laid it down on the baseline ever so daintily when he walked in the first inning . . . Hudson gave up only two walks, but walked only one man, Pesky—twice . . . Eddie Robinson's smart pick-up saved Eddie Yost an error on Batts' grounder in the second inning . . . Ted Williams went hitless, partly because he hit slow rollers to Robinson three times . . . Hudson, now one of the league-leading pitchers with his six wins, has pitched better ball games than yesterday's . . . Williams made the day's best catch—and the most nonchalant—when he raced far in for a one-handed grab of Yost's drooping fly in the sixth . . . In today's series finale, the Nats will face their old pal, Walter Masterson . . . Bucky Harris will start Steve Nagy against Boston.

Howerdd Thumps Kotz, 7-6, for Schoolboy Title

Gene Howerdd, 15-year-old first year student at Georgetown Prep, walked away with the second flight championship of the Washington Post schoolboy golf tourney yesterday, defeating Dick Kotz of St. Albans, 7 and 6, at Georgetown Prep.

Howerdd took a 3-hole lead after the first nine and from there on it was no contest. Quarter final play in the championship flight will resume Wednesday at Chevy Chase. The four winners will play the semi-final and final rounds in the National Celebrities Tournament June 3-4.

Jets Top Chicago In Roller Finale

The Washington Jets closed their home stand before 2607 spectators at Uline Arena yesterday, when they won their third Roller Derby game in four starts from the Chicago Westerners, 21-15.

This marked Washington's eleventh victory in 19 starts and second successive series win.

Constitution Considered Safe By Lane Despite 'Cold' War

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—United States constitutional Government will not fall for a cold-war casualty, Governor Lane declared tonight.

"There seems to be no good reason to fear that the undying principles of that Constitution will not survive," Lane said in a speech prepared for a "Wake Up America" rally sponsored by the Annapolis Elks Lodge tonight.

The Constitution will live, he said, "even though we today face an enemy greater than any that ever has threatened civilization; even though we face forces which threaten to engulf the world in a struggle that well may spell the end of that civilization as we know it."

Preceded by a parade of police, veterans' organizations and fire companies, the meeting was one of many held by Elks Clubs throughout the country to coincide with the Communist youth rally in Berlin.

Paul C. Wolman of Baltimore, past national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Circuit Judge Benjamin Michaelson of Annapolis also spoke in the high school auditorium.

Issues of government were clear-cut in World War II, from which this country emerged the victor, Lane said.

"The United States of America is a shining example to other liberty loving peoples of the world, whose fervent prayer is that they may be given the chance to follow in the pathway we have trod," the Governor said.

The driver of the second car, Russell A. O'Neal, 25, of Cumberland, Md., escaped injury. But his wife, Evelyn, 23, was treated at Suburban Hospital for cuts of the face and arms.

State police said they would confer with juvenile authorities. Young Chrichton is the son of Robert B. Chrichton, a retired Navy commander.

In Washington, 2-year-old General Morris, of 144 C st. sw., was injured seriously yesterday afternoon, when he ran from behind parked cars into the path of a taxi in the 300 block of 2d st. sw. Police said the driver of the cab was James T. Sutton, 40, of 51 K st. nw. No charges were placed against him.

The Morris boy was given emergency treatment at Providence Hospital, then transferred to Gallinger Hospital. He was in serious condition last night with a brain concussion and scalp cuts.

A death was reported and two were injured near Luray, Va. The victim was Staff Sergt. Clifford C. Wade, 28, of Kansas City, Mo., stationed at Langley Air Force Base. The accident happened when their car failed to negotiate a turn.

Injured were Andrew C. Elliott, 27, of 215 12th st. ne., and Corpl. Forrest Burnette, 21, of Stanley, Va., also stationed at Langley.

Treated at Page Memorial Hospital, Elliott and Burnette later were transferred to Walter Reed.

Wife Throws Invalid From Fifth Floor

New York, May 28 (AP). — A plump, gray-haired woman admitted without remorse today that she threw her frail, paralyzed husband from a kitchen window five stories to his death.

"I just did it, that's all," said Mrs. Anna Bornhold, 58, when asked why she lifted Fred Bornholdt, 64, from his bed and dropped him out a window in their Bronx apartment last night.

Magistrate Rafael R. Murphy ordered her held for a hearing Wednesday on a homicide charge, after which she will be taken to Bellevue Hospital for mental observation.

Police said her husband lay helplessly in bed and pleaded with his wife not to do it. She quoted him as saying, "please don't throw me out."

Mrs. Bornholdt said she told her husband, "I have to do it."

They had been married 20 years. Bornholdt, a waiter, had been bedridden since he suffered a stroke last November 2.

Police said Mrs. Bornholdt apparently broke under the strain of caring for her invalid husband.

They quoted her as saying once, "I am a bad girl."

Magistrate Murphy told her she could phone or write relatives. She said, "I have nobody."

Paratrooper Does 54 Jumps in 1 Day; Misses Record

Clinton, N. C., May 28 (AP).—A Fort Bragg paratrooper made 54 parachute jumps here today, but fell short of the 76 jumps he hoped to make to set a world's record.

Exhausted, but uninjured, Pfc. Neal Stewart, 22, of Birmingham, Ala., said "I guess I just gave out."

He plans another crack soon at the unofficial world's record of 75 jumps in one day. The record was set recently by a Yugoslavian in London.

All Stewart's jumps were "free falls" (He pulled the rip cord to open the parachute himself.)

Albania Electing New National Assembly

London, May 28 (AP).—Radio reports from Tirana said virtually 100 percent of Albanian voters were casting ballots in today's elections of members of the National Assembly.

All candidates are members of the single political party, the National Liberation Movement.

2 London Papers Predict New U. S. Atom Spy Arrests

London, May 28 (AP).—Two London newspapers predicted today that more persons, including some Americans, will be arrested in the atomic spy probe.

The Sunday weekly Reynolds News said: "More than a dozen atomic scientists, government officials and businessmen are likely to be arrested soon in the biggest international spy roundup ever known and charged with passing top secret information to Russia. They include a Briton, at least one Canadian and six Americans."

The Sunday Empire News, a Kemsley newspaper, said that for the past 10 days, Dr. Klaus Fuchs, convicted German-born British atomic spy, had been "identifying suspect after suspect from films of thousands of people flown secretly and under close guard from America." It continued:

"Fresh arrests in the war on atom spies in America and Canada are certain to follow information he has been giving day by day."

Reynolds News said the new arrests would be a direct result of the questioning of Fuchs by American FBI men and representatives of the British intelligence service.

Fuchs is serving a 14-year sentence for funneling atomic secrets to the Soviet Union.

N. C. Runoff Indicated

needed more votes than the other three candidates combined. But with only 72 precincts unreported it appeared virtually certain he could not increase his lead by the necessary 13,663 votes.

Smith has until June 7 to demand the runoff and there was every indication he would do so, setting up a tough battle for Graham, who was named after the death of Senator J. Melville Broughton to serve until this primary. Broughton died in 1949 shortly after his election to a six-year term.

Observers believed that in any runoff the 63-year-old Graham might find it difficult to woo the more than 50,000 votes that went to Reynolds, who ran third in the four-man primary.

Smith had no comment on the possibility of a runoff primary. But his publicity manager said campaign workers would be summoned back Monday to prepare for the second primary.

The voters turned out in huge numbers Saturday, far eclipsing the record of 516,000 ballots cast in 1936.

Five incumbent Congressmen who faced opposition all won renomination. They were Representatives Thurmond Chatham, Carl Durham, F. Ertel Carlyle, B. C. Dean and Hamilton Jones. Six other Congressmen had no opposition.

Administration Gains Hope for Overhauling Civil Service System

Administration hopes for overhauling the Civil Service system along the lines proposed by the Hoover Commission have been revised upward.

Its top personnel officials believe there is a real chance now to get at least part of the program at this session of Congress. Several recent developments have helped the cause. Among them are:

(1) Budget Bureau and Civil Service officials are finally agreed on a compromise bill, and they have explained it in detail to Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee, and other congressional leaders at friendly sessions; (2) the personnel program is being suggested as a substitute for the Taber-Thomas and Jensen job-cutting riders voted by the House on the argument that it would save money and bring about more efficient Government at the same time, and (3) the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report is making a big push for the personnel program.

Agencies would do more recruiting and hiring under the Hoover plan, but subject to Civil Service direction; career nonveterans would be given a greater degree of job security, and supervisors would have to certify that the conduct and performance of employes under them were satisfactory before they could receive in-grade raises. Those are just a few of the reforms proposed by the Administration.

GAO: The layoffs at General Accounting Office here won't be quite as tough as was first expected. This is the story:

As of March 23, the agency had to abolish about 685 jobs to get within its prospective 1951 budget. Since that time, 190 have left their jobs voluntarily, and it is expected 63 others will do likewise by June 24, the big layoff day.

Officials now estimate the actual layoff on that day will be about 430 employes of whom fewer than 300 will be in this city. More than that number of persons were given 30-day notices last week. This means that some notices will be withdrawn, and other employes will be demoted through the "bumping" process. GAO is making major reductions in its offices at St. Louis, Cleveland, and Asheville.

LITTLE CABINET: Agriculture Secretary Brannan has asked Congress to set up two new assistant secretary jobs in his department, one of which would be assistant secretary for administration. The Congress rejected a White House plan to reorganize the department that proposed the two new top jobs.

An assistant secretary for administration will be appointed in the Labor Department. There are several candidates for the post. The logical choice is James Dodson, a career employe, who in reality has been doing the job all along.

I & N: Immigration Commissioner Watson Miller, who is resigning, is one of the Administration's most popular officials on Capitol Hill.

An attempt, for example, was made to make a minor cut in Immigration's budget during a recent House debate. The opponents made only one argument—that Watson Miller was a wonderful fellow who had the confidence of Congress. The amendment was defeated overwhelmingly.

FIRINGS: Civil Service has ordered the firing by August 31 of nonstatus employes here and nearby in messenger, phone operator, and phone supervisor jobs that pay from $2450 to $2850 to start . . . Also scheduled for firings by that date are nonstatus economist and statisticians in grades GS-13 through GS-15.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service has this advice for persons who pass steno and typist examinations for jobs here—get in proof of residence forms without delay . . . A Civil Service survey of agencies reveals more than 1000 young persons who passed recent tests for junior scientist and engineer will be offered jobs within a few months, if the agencies have the money to pay them. . . .

A Civil Service test is open for supply cataloger, $3100 to $6400, to fiill vacancies in nearby states.

Bishop Dun Supported By Several Clergymen

Episcopal Leader Praised in Sermons For Invitations to Communion Service

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Greater Washington clergymen yesterday voiced support of the Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who has been criticized for inviting ministers of all Protestant denominations to join in a communion service last Ash Wednesday at Washington Cathedral.

Because of the invitation, the Right Rev. Angus Dun last week was charged with "flagrant disregard" of church doctrine by the American Church Union, a "high church" organization within the Episcopal church.

Support of the bishop came not only from clergymen of his own denomination but from representatives of other churches, who referred to the issue in their Sunday sermons.

Methodist Speaker

At the Washington Cathedral's morning service the speaker was a Methodist clergyman, the Rev. Charles W. Ranson. During the service the Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the Cathedral, invited Mr. Ranson and other non-Episcopalians in the congregation to join in the communion service.

The Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st., declared Bishop Dun is "one of the most intelligent, matured and statesmanlike Christians that I know."

"What Bishop Dun did on Ash Wednesday was in the spirit of the World Council of Churches, of which he is an active leader," he said.

Praise, Rather Than Blame

At First Congregational Church, the Rev. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf said the bishop "deserves praise rather than blame, for he acted within the spirit of Christ" in making the sacraments of the cathedral available to ministers of several Christian denominations.

"If some ecclesiastical law forbids such Christian courtesy, might it not be that such a law does not conform to the spirit of Christ?" he asked.

Two Baptist clergymen also supported the bishop—the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church and newly-elected president of the Northern Baptist Convention.

'Strongly Support Him'

At St. John's Episcopal Church, 3244 O st. nw., the Rev. William Sharp, rector, said the protest came from a small minority within the diocese and "is in no sense the feeling of the majority of the clergy." The bishop, he said, stands for inclusive churchmanship and "in that we strongly support him."

The Rev. Robert S. Trenbath of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw., also backed his bishop's action.

The majority of the clergy in the diocese, "heartily approve of the gestures of friendliness Bishop Dun has made toward other churches and the steps he has taken to make the whole Christian church an effective witness to the problems that confront us. As one of the great men of the church today he has our solid support," Mr. Trenbath said.

Suspect Is Arrested On False Alarm Charge

Police yesterday charged Richard J. Stubbs, 24, of 125 E st. nw., with turning in a false alarm at 4th and E sts. nw. about 2:15 a. m.

Detectives Joseph Bonaccorsy and Mark Gray, cruising in the neighborhood, stopped Stubbs after a passerby told them he saw Stubbs pull the alarm.

General View of Goat Show in Fort Myer Gym

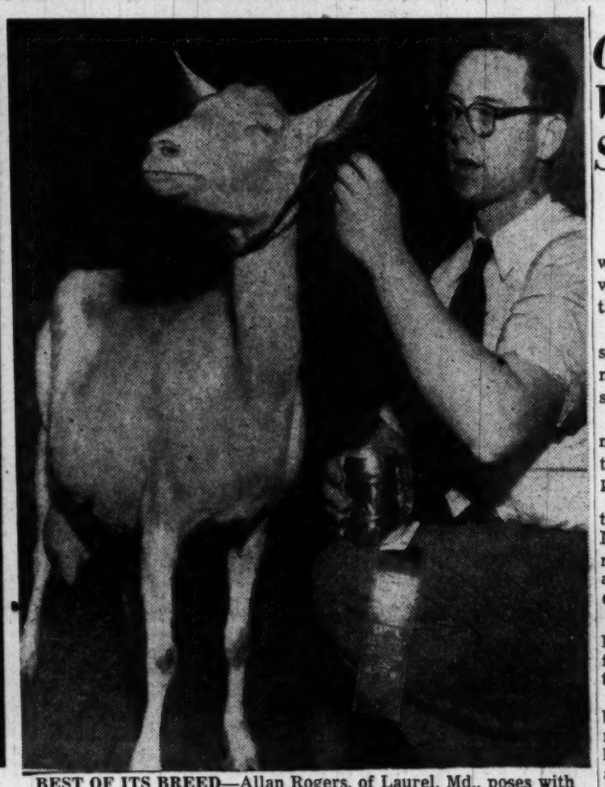
DEVIL A GOAT WOULD BE—Robin Archer, 7, Fairfax, Va., adjusts red-cloth devil costume which won first prize. Her "kid" is officially known as Postorami Fairfax



BEST OF ITS BREED—Allan Rogers, of Laurel, Md., poses with his goat Panama Teresa, and first-place cup won for placing first in "best of breed" class

Goats Are Pets Who Pay Way, Says Breeder

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

"It's good for ulcers," Al Rogers was saying yesterday, explaining why people use goat's milk although there are plenty of cows.

Also explaining why he didn't sleep Saturday night and might be needing some goat's milk himself soon.

Goat's milk, he was saying, is naturally homogenized, has extremely small fat globules which pass through the stomach quickly.

Avowed cow milk men, listening to Rogers yesterday at the Capital Dairy Goat Association's third annual show in the Fort Myer gym, agreed goat's milk is just as sweet.

Could Use Some, Too

When the show ended at twilight, Rogers was just about ready for little fat globules that pass through the stomach quickly.

The 28-year-old Laurel, Md., breeder, who was also show chairman, had spent Saturday night looking after his Panama Teresa and three other entries in the official milking contest.

"There's no sentiment to a cow," Rogers interjected. "Goats are more like pets—the only pet that pays its own way."

Following the rules of official contests, Rogers and the other breeders milked their pets dry at 4 p. m. Saturday.

Exactly 12 hours later (this was in the middle of the night), the boys fell to again, and at 4 p. m. yesterday, Rogers started squirting for the final record.

Standing by was Mrs. Julia Ernst of Harvard, Mass., an official tester.

For his sleepless night's work, Rogers had 9.9 pounds (about five quarts) of fresh goat's milk at 4.15 percent butterfat, and second prize. Panama Teresa had given nobly.

Dora Lea Big Winner

The big winner was Green Hills Dora Lea, who contributed 13.5 pounds of 3.6 percent butterfat. She belongs to Bert Nye, jr., of McLean, Va.

The best looking goat of the 107 entries, according to Judge Fred B. Keifer of Marshall, Ill., was the chocolate-colored, 8-year-old Barry's Lark, owned by Arthur E. Christiansen of Silver Spring, Md.

A little doe, fitted out like a red devil with horns and dragging tail, won the costumed contest for seven-year-old Robin Archer, of Fairfax, Va.

The granddaughter of Capt. Walter Karig, USN, best-selling author and special assistant to the Chief of Naval Operations, Robin was raised on goat's milk.

Robin is partners with her mother, Mrs. Patty Karig Archer, in the business of marketing the outpourings of 12 pedigreed and registered Swiss Toggenburg goats.

Bullet Test Slated Today In Slaying Of Cabbie

'Several Hundred' Soldiers Quizzed In Brutal Death At Bolling Base

"Several hundred" soldiers were questioned yesterday in connection with the slaying of a cab driver at Bolling Air Base Saturday.

Agents of Bolling's Office of Special Investigation and Metropolitan police homicide detectives questioned the men in each barracks in round-the-clock sessions.

A bullet taken from the head of the victim, 24-year-old Gordon C. Brown, will be given a ballistic test today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the National Bureau of Standards.

Once its caliber is established, tests will be made of weapons of similar caliber kept on the base to determine whether a gun belonging to the base could have fired the fatal bullet. A full search of the south end of the base, where Brown's body was found, has failed to uncover a weapon.

But questioning of the 1500 men stationed on that section of the base can not be completed until men who left the field on passes have returned.

Base authorities are particularly interested in six men who left the base between 2 a. m. and 11:30 a. m. Saturday, during a period when Bolling was closed down. Among them is a 28-year-old sergeant who has not checked in at the base since 2 a. m. Saturday.

Brown was found, fatally wounded and severely beaten, one mile from the main gate and 30 feet from his cab, about 2 a. m. Saturday. He died in the Base Hospital a little more than two hours later.

Employed as a typewriter repairman for the Postoffice Department, Brown drove a cab part time to pay for a home he had just built. He was married, the father of a 4-year-old son and lived at 224 Carmody Hills dr., Carmody Hills, Md., near Seat Pleasant.

Robbery was discounted as a motive, since $6 in his change-carrier and $4 in his wallet were found intact. Brown's father, Gordon C. Brown, sr., also a cab driver, said his son carried about this same amount of money with him normally.

Homicide detectives revealed last night that, so far in their questioning, they have not been able to locate anyone who heard a shot. Since no blood was found in the cab, police have discounted the possibility that Brown may have been shot off the base and his body driven in by his killer.

Three guards at the main gate said they checked Brown's cab through about 1:50 a. m., but do not know whether he had a passenger.

Navy divers may be sent out for a more thorough search of the river bottom today, but police doubt that a gun could have been thrown into the deep water area.

Meanwhile, Brown's body was released to the Lee funeral home, 4th and Massachusetts ave. ne. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

1600 GWU Graduates Urged to Save World From 'Exaltation of Man and Materialism'

The 1600 members of George Washington University's graduating class were called on last night to take part in a "moral and religious revolution" to rescue the world from "self-exaltation of man and materialism."

The Rev. William Curtis Draper, jr., pastor of the Trinity Episcopal Church, Upper Marlboro, beseeched each to help in returning the world to righteousness and justice.

"You will be physicians, attorneys, teachers, engineers, businessmen, scientists, homemakers, architects, librarians, clergymen and officials of Government. Many of you will be leaders.

"Each will influence the lives of many others by what you are," he warned.

Suspicious of Each Other

The Rev. Draper described the world as lacking in faith "on both sides of the Iron Curtain." People have developed suspicion of the "honesty and integrity of the other." They have begun to doubt whether others are "really concerned about justice and moral conduct."

In this country people have come to accept graft and bribery in the expediency of the day, the speaker declared. Unscrupulous trade practices by which the mighty rob "the pennies of the poor" are "considered the norm for our age."

"Do you wonder, then that our kind of democracy, as it is seen in practice, is looked upon with disdain by Communists, Nazis and Fascists?" the Rev. Draper asked.

Only a return to God and his ways will solve this situation and bring peace to the troubled world, he declared.

The sermon was the principal feature of the GWU baccalaureate service at Washington Cathedral. The program began with the traditional slow acedemic procession of faculty and graduating students in caps and gowns.

In graduation exercises at two Catholic schools, speakers emphasized a need for religious education rather than a secular one.

Complete Development

The Rev. Raymond Hunt, OMI, addressing 62 graduates of the Academy of Holy Names, congratulated the students on completing their training. He said secular education trains the body, but not the soul. A religious education provides complete development, Father Hunt emphasized.

The program was held in St. Gabriel's Church with the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, presiding. The school is at 711 Pershing dr., Silver Spring.

Earlier, the Very Rev. Edward G. Fitzgerald, OP, told 72 graduates of the Academy of Holy Cross, plus an audience of 700, that Catholic parents want their children to have a belief in God above all. Such training cannot be assured in public schools where parents do not know what the teachers believe, he declared.

The ceremony, 74th in the academy's history, was held in the Dunbarton College chapel.

Motorist Faces Eight Charges After Cop's Bruising 'Ride'

A Southeast Washington man was booked yesterday on eight charges involving a bumpy and, bruising "ride" given a Fifth Precinct policeman Saturday night.

The starting point was 8th st. and Virginia ave. se., where Pvts. Vincent G. Lusby, 33, and John R. Bowles, 31, waited with a prisoner for a police wagon.

They saw a car drive over a trolley platform and roll onto the sidewalk.

Lusby went over to the car. As he set foot on the running board, the car started down 8th st.

Lusby hung on. The driver, according to police, swung to the wrong side of the street and brushed parked cars, trying to knock off the policeman.

Private Lusby, however, still held on, doing a rhumba with the fenders of at least two cars. One spot-light and one rear-view mirror were knocked off en route.

At this point Lusby tapped the driver on the head with his night stick.

The car swung suddenly and Lusby whirled off. The car kept going. Lusby headed for Providence Hospital.

Private Bowles took over from there. Lusby had obtained the license number and police traced the auto to its owner, George H. Young, 66, of 637 South Carolina ave. se.

Early yesterday Bowles went to the address and discovered, he said, that Young was merely a passenger. The driver, he said he was told, was Otis Mitchell, about 35, of the same address. Mitchell was not at home.

Bowles hid behind a bush, arrested Mitchell when he arrived about 3 a. m., and took him to Gallinger Hospital for treatment of a head injury.

Young, as owner, was charged with permitting his car to be driven by a man without a license.

Mitchell was charged with the following:

Assault with a dangerous weapon (auto); not having a permit; two charges of hit and run—one for each parked auto struck; driving over an unoccupied loading zone; driving over a sidewalk; driving on the wrong side of the street, and traveling at an unreasonable speed.

Young and Mitchell will appear in Municipal Court today.

Horse Named Tom Throws Man, Flees

Police yesterday were looking for a horse named Tom that threw a stablehand Saturday night and galloped away.

The stablehand, Bill Miles, 49 said the horse was owned by Frank Jenkins of 2220 Bryan pl. se. It was last seen at Wheeler rd. and Barnaby tr. se. Miles was not injured.

Radio Plan To Aid Parkers Threatened

Radio Station WWDC has a plan to save motorists parking tickets, but it may backfire, the Police Department warned.

The station announced yesterday it would send its agents around town depositing nickels in red-flagged parking meters, leaving behind a printed reminder that:

"You were overparked. Cost us a nickel but we saved you $3. Just another service of WWDC, Washington's most powerful independent. Park at 1260 on your radio dial."

Sort of a tit-for-tat affair, a station spokesman explained. We help you, you help us.

But the Police Department Traffic Division doesn't see it that way.

Says Capt. L. T. Johnson, commanding the division: "We will check cars for overtime, regardless of whether there is coin in the meter. Putting a coin in doesn't make overtime parking legal. The areas are marked for one hour or 20 minutes."

But on the other hand, the department will not seek out the WWDC memos on the meters as proof that a vehicle was parked overtime. "That kind of evidence wouldn't stand up in court," Captain Johnson said.

The "service" is scheduled to start at 9 a. m. today.

Archbishop Confirms Class Of 532 Adults

Five-hundred and thirty-two adults yesterday were confirmed by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw.

They came from all parishes in the archdiocese of Washington. Assisting the archbishop in the confirmation service were the Rev. Charles Roach of Assumption parish and the Rev. Joyce Russell of Benedict, Md.

The Right Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of the cathedral, preached at the service and the archbishop was celebrant of Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

Marine Drummer of 30-Year Service to Retire Wednesday

Chicchese

The beet-red face of the 5-foot 4-inch Nick as he swings along with the United States Marine Band pounding his big bass drum is familiar on many an American parade street and fondly known to thousands of Americans.

Nick, now 49, started as a cornetist and trumpet man with the band. Then his health took a beating and he knew he could no longer play a wind instrument.

Undaunted, Nick got an audition as bass drummer and made it, beginning in 1940.

On cornet, trumpet and drum he has done his stuff for notables as well as thousands of plain Americans.

He has played before the King and Queen of England, before five Presidents of the United States and at many Gridiron dinners.

Nick calls Youngstown, Ohio, home, but he has many relatives living in Italy, and he and his wife will visit them this summer.

Nick is having fun planning the trip. There's ony one regret:

"I can't take my bass drum along."

William B. Bennett, Transit Training Official, to Retire

William B. Bennett, soft-spoken vice president and secretary of the Capital Transit Co., is retiring from the firm on Wednesday.

Bennett

In his 17 years with the CTC, Bennett has trained many men in utility careers with the result that he has a group of stalwart supporters in the firm.

Now 71, Bennett originally came to Washington in 1930 to study the Capital Traction Co. and the Washington Railway and Electric Co., then independent firms. In 1933, they were merged into the Capital Transit Co. and Bennett was made an assistant to the president.

From then on, he moved upward in the firm, becoming secretary in 1938, and vice president in 1942 and a director four years later. He resides at the Westchester apartments.

Among other activities, Bennet is president of the Board of Trustees, National Presbyterian Church; member of the board of the Merchant and Manufacturers Association, Glen Echo Park Co. and the Montgomery Bus Co., of which he is a former president. He is a past president of the Maryland Utilities Association and a life member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Succeeding him will be Doran S. Weinstein, now assistant to the president and assistant secretary. Weinstein joined the firm after a syndicate of Florida investors bought control of the CTC.

Memorial Sunday Prayers Offered

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Prayerful tributes to the Nation's war dead marked Greater Washington's observance of Memorial Sunday yesterday.

General O'Neill

Gray clouds and occasional showers marred some of the outdoor programs sponsored by religious and patriotic organizations.

One of the largest services of the day was at Arlington National Cemetery, where the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus sponsored the annual Memorial Mass for the War Dead.

More than 5000 attended the rites and saw representatives of nearly 100 local and national patriotic and Catholic organizations place wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Secularism "Danger" Cited

Brig. Gen. James H. O'Neill, deputy chief of chaplains of the Army, said in his sermon that "the danger in American life today is that this materialism and secularism . . . is going to bury us . . . and cause us to lose our souls."

He urged his audience to "take increased devotion" from the souls of the departed of all faiths buried at Arlington. Celebrant of the mass was the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Bishop of Richmond.

Uniformed Army and Navy nurses joined in placing poppies on the Arlington tombs of nurses who died in war service later in the day. The service was in honor of Jane A. Delano, first head of the Army Nurse Corps, and was sponsored by Jane A. Delano Post of the American Legion.

Watson B. Miller, Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, paid tribute to the nurses for their work in relief of physical pain and mental distress.

Watergate Service Held

Members of the District Department of the Spanish War Veterans honored their war dead at a memorial service at the Watergate.

At other services, various veterans' groups honored war dead. Among them were the Rockville American Legion Post No. 86, at Rockville Baptist Church; Washington Post 58, Jewish War Veterans, at the Montgomery County Jewish Community; Pepco Post, American Legion, at the Army Medical Center Chapel; Phillips-Kleiner Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the memorial plaque at Baltimore blvd. and Greenbelt rd., and the Cheverly, Md., American Legion Post 108 and its auxiliary at Cheverly Community Church.

Memorial activities will continue today, with rites at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Gen. George C. Marshall will speak at the main Memorial Day service at Arlington Cemetery at 1 p. m. Tuesday. Laying of wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier will begin at 11 a. m., when Capt. Adam J. Eisenhauer, United States Army, will place a floral tribute on the Tomb on behalf of President Truman.

Md. Example In Religion Is Praised

St. Mary's City, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—The early Catholic colonists of Maryland and their Protestant associates set "a pattern of religious and civic liberty for all future generations in the United States," the Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., declared today.

Father LaFarge, editor of the national Catholic weekly, America, was principal speaker at special services at the Pilgrim's Alta-Monument on St. Mary's River here.. The monument overlooks the site where pilgrims from the ships Ark and Dove landed in 1634.

The services commemorated the Maryland origin of the Nation's religious liberty and the work of the early Jesuit missionaries of Maryland—the Rev. Andrew White, S. J.; the Rev. John Altham, S. J., and Brother Thomas Gervase, S. J. Several thousand persons, including delegations from Washington, attended the ceremonies. The sponsors were the Southern Maryland Councils of the Knights of Columbus.

Father LaFarge said the patterns of religious liberty established by the Maryland Catholics included three features:

First, that no church was established by law; second, that "the right to worship God according to one's conscience was a sacred right," and third, that "religion was respected."

Following the ceremonies, the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was celebrated by the Rev. Louis Wheeler, S. J., pastor of St. Aloysius Church, Leonardtown, Md.

Speaking at a World War II memorial ceremony at the American military cemetery here, Harriman said "we must prevent another such war . . . we will prevent it by combining the strength of freedom-loving, peace-loving peoples."

Edward Read Dies at 47 At White Oak

Edward B. Read, 47, member of a trio of brothers who terrorized the Four Corners neighborhood in the 30's, died of a heart attack yesterday at White Oak, Md.

Read had been living alone in a shack on the William McCeney farm near White Oak. Shortly after noon yesterday he went to the house and told James Malone, who lives at the McCeney home, that he felt ill and asked to be taken to a doctor.

"I think I am going to die," Read said. Then he slumped to the floor. A certificate of death from natural causes, due to a heart attack, was issued by Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner. The body was removed to the Warner E. Pumphrey Funeral Home at Silver Spring, Md. Police were looking for his relatives late yesterday to notify them of the death.

The three Read brothers were scions of an old Maryland family but in their youth they turned to pursuits in conflict with the law. Eddie served time in the penitentiary for assault and robbery of a salesman, Frank Kolar, of Arlington, Va., in 1934. Kolar was slashed in the throat and robbed of $207.

While Eddie was in jail, a brother, William (Willie) Read, became involved in two murders. One was the brutal slaying of Elwood Matthews, an elderly Silver Spring farmer, November 21, 1937, at Four Corners. The other was the torch slaying of W. Earle Dollman, Charleston, W. Va., salesman, who had stopped to aid Read and his companions when they ran out of gas near Charleston. It was for this murder that Willie Read was hanged in Charleston.

The other brother, known as Pee-Wee, was sentenced to serve time in the penitentiary for conspiracy to murder.

Their father was a wealthy man but refused to give the boys spending money, police testified at their trials, telling them to "get your own money." He died several years ago.

Baby's Condition Still Critical After Throat Operation

Nine-weeks-old Barbara Gambrell of Falls Church, Va., remained in a critical condition last night at Arlington Hospital, following an operation to relieve a growth in her throat which impeded the child's breathing.

The child was taken to Arlington Hospital Thursday night after the parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gambrell of 1008 Birch st., had encountered trouble entering her in Washington hospitals. Arlington Hospital officials said yesterday she should have been taken there first, since the family lives in the area served by the institution. The child would have been admitted whether the parents could pay or not in view of the emergency, officials said. The American Legion has agreed to pay for at least part of the treatment.

Gloomy Sunday? Not For D. C. Socialites

By Elizabeth Maguire

ALTHOUGH Washington gardens are in full bloom and garden parties were at the top of the calendar yesterday, a determined drizzle at party time drove everyone indoors.

Not a spirit was dampened, however, and every hostess felt her party was a real success.

At the Peruvian Embassy, diplomatic and official society attended a ceremony in which the Peruvian Ambassador Don Fernando Berckemeyer conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of the Sun of Peru upon former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies.

Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer received their guests with Mr. and Mrs. Davies in the drawing room of the embassy, the hostess in coffee lace trimmed in brown chiffon, and Mrs. Davies in Alice blue taffeta.

Mr. Davies received his honor for services to Peru in 1923 as adviser during the Tacna-Arica dispute. He spoke of his warm appreciation of the great honor and of the importance of continued friendship between the northern and southern countries of this hemisphere.

Senora de Berckemeyer adjusted her garden party very quickly by setting up two bars indoors, and placing garden chairs about a sheltered terrace. A four-piece orchestra played Latin-American dance music and a light buffet was served in the dining room.

Among the many guests were the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon, Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Davies Fitch, the Spanish Ambassador-at-Large and Senora de Lequerica, the Minister of Luxembourg, Huges Le Gallais, former Senator Hiram Bingham, Mrs. J. William Fulbright, and the Assistant to the President and Mrs. John R. Steelman.

Just a few doors from the Peruvian Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Kimberly tucked their guests under two marquees set up in the garden. No one minded the rain at all. "It makes the party gayer," said one guest.

In this gathering were Gen. and Mrs. Anthony McAuliffe, Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mosier, Mr. and Mrs. Steelman again, Mrs. J. Benton Webb, Mrs. Leigh Brite, Mrs. Auguste Boas and many more.

Folks Get Around In Spite of Rain

"WE move in the same circles, I see," was a comment heard more than once by the time a number of guests met each other for a second or third time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris. The Morris party was in honor of members of the American Newspaper Women's Club and the Women's National Press Club.

This congenial gathering included a number of diplomats and officials and their wives, as well as men and women of the Fourth Estate. The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani were there. Also, the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Zuleta-Angel, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Nieto del Rio, the Pakistan Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani, and the Finnish Minister, Dr. K. T. Jutila.

The Secretary of the Navy, Francis P. Matthews, turned up here, there and everywhere, as did Mr. and Mrs. Steelman. Mrs. Harold Walker minded Coco, French poodle of fame, for her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., while the latter chatted with cohorts.

Others in the gathering were Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, the Counselor of the Irish Embassy and Mrs. Hugh McCann, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Coe, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. James Tencher, Mr. and Mrs. David Fernsler, Jack Logan, Mrs. Harold Burton, and Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, again.

Garden Party At Westmoreland

FARTHER OUT, in Westmoreland Hills, Col. and Mrs. George Green gave a garden party for service friends and old Washington friends. Every color iris was in full bloom for the occasion—purple, white, brown, yellow, blue and beige. Throughout the afternoon, tea and cocktails were served with a buffet.

Meanwhile, a group of young students of Georgetown Visitation Convent gathered for tea at the American Newspaper Women's Club. Miss Mary Courtney, daughter of Mrs. John J. Courtney of Silver Spring, was the guest of honor, and Miss Florence Taaffe was the hostess. Miss Courtney will graduate in June from the convent, and many of her classmates attended the tea.

Friends of the hostess who presided at the tea table and punch bowl included Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, Mrs. John A. Carroll, Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, Mrs. Elizabeth Young, Miss Diane Carroll and Miss Amelia Young.

Other assistants for the afternoon were Mrs. James A. Murray, Mrs. James W. Boyer, Mrs. John Vincent Boyle, Miss Grace McGerr, president of the Women's National Press Club; Miss Jane Stafford, president of the Women's Press Club; Mrs. Luis Aveleyra, Mrs. William H. Collins, Mrs. Louis Stein, Miss Geraldine Walsh, Mrs. Frank Duane, Mrs. George E. Connery, Miss Urcel Daniel and Mrs. Joseph E. Blomgren.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Loy Anderson invited a small gathering of friends in for cocktails yesterday at their home between 6 and 8 p. m.

White Is Smart For Summer Days

There always comes a time during the summer when you go to a luncheon for visiting guests, or a canasta afternoon at the country club or something else of the same semi-public nature. That's when you need a pretty smart spectator sports dress instead of your so-called "country clothes."

The smartest fashion this year is the all-white dress—especially an all-pleated white shantung or crepe in the Dior manner. If you're more conservative, choose one of the pretty new soft shirtwaist dresses. And if you want to be a little dressier, there are lovely white linens with decorative white laces.

Burchette

THERE'S more to this than meets the eye, obviously, but the young audience watching Magicians Robert Boernstein, Thomas Kilpatrick and Robert Stevenson was never quite sure what. Their mystification was one of the features of the Soroptimist Club garden party, held Saturday at the home of Miss Mary V. Judge. The party was a benefit. Proceeds will go to a summer camp for children with heart ailments.

Your Figure, Madame

Can't Hide in a Bathing Suit

By Ida Jean Kain

DEARIE, do you remember when . . . a bathing suit could keep a secret? Test your memory about the good old days gone by. If you remember those old-fashioned suits with bric-a-brac and braid and skirts covering the thigh . . . then, as the song goes, you're much older than I!

The blushing truth is, no designer has come out with a really modest bathing suit within the reach of most of our memories. And today there is no hiding place even in a beach robe.

But no use singing the blues; let's get on with the shape-ups. There are a few weeks until summer, and in that length of time anyone can be a bathing beauty, for then swimming will fix everything.

Here's a program designed to slim the midriff and waist, and the hips and thighs.

Position: Standing with right side an inch or so from the wall, right arm raised and placed against the wall, left arm down at side. Middle muscles should be held sungly up and in.

Movement: Stretching from the waistline, push the arm up the wall—way up! Repeat slowly six times, then change position and stretch left arm up the wall. Be sure the stretch is all through the midsection.

Movement: Pull up snugly with abdominal muscles, keep hip muscles contracted, and slowly pull away from the door, bending out to left side. Keep bending until you feel a strong pull on the waistline muscles. Back to position and repeat three times. Change sides and repeat another three counts—this time bending out to the right. Gradually increase to six counts for each side.

Movement: Hold the left leg still, and vigorously swing the right leg back and forth—up in front, then way back, 12 times. Roll over and swing 12 counts with the left leg. Gradually work up to 30 counts in all, resting between each 10.

And the thighs . . .

Movement: Raise right leg in air and move it in wide circles from the hip, knee straight. Circle six times, rest, repeat another six. Roll over and circle with the left leg. Work up to 25 counts with each leg.

'I'm Sticking'

White Queen Of African Tribe 'Lonely'

By Arthur Gavshon

Serowe, Bechuanaland, South Africa, May 6 (AP). — Ruth Khama, the white queen of the black Bamangwato, is tensely aware that her marriage has brought to the fore the touchy question of Britain's relations with the nonwhite races of the empire.

But the pretty former London stenographer has even more to bear than the trial of being tumbled suddenly from the obscurity of the English middle class into the glare of world attention.

In an interview she admitted frankly that the five servants who help her run her modest bungalow "palace" do not dispel the isolation enshrouding her home in the deep African bush.

That isolation is heightened by the fact that the leaders of the white colony of Serowe — mainly government officials, traders and their families—will have nothing to do with her.

The whites look down on mixed marriages. At the town's few social occasions they studiously ignore her. She gets no invitations from them. She has no white callers.

Husband May Return Again

HER husband, Seretse, chief of the Bamangwatos, was able to come home last month for a brief stay. They had not seen each other since he went to London five months ago to be told he could not return to Serowe for five years because of the fuss over their marriage. Later the government relented and permitted him to make the visit. He expects to be able to return again for a time when their baby is born—in about two months.

Those whites who might try to take the edge off Ruth's loneliness fear loss of their jobs if they do so.

Won't Be Sent 'Scampering Home'

DR. D. MOIKANGOA, Ruth's Negro physician, has warned the British that continued separation from Seretse will imperil her health.

Despite all this, Ruth remains defiant of what she sees as a deliberate campaign "to send me scampering home."

"I'm sticking," she said tersely.

Some of the Bamangwato resent her, but they remain loyal to Seretse, their chieftain.

Ruth lives in a simply furnished brick and mortar home on the outskirts of this sprawling mud hut capital. The home is encircled by high wall and thorn trees. A matronly Bamangwato cook prepares the food but Ruth does most of the shopping.

She drives a green 1949 Chevrolet to shops or the post-office.

She takes her morning bath in water carted from the town. Her house is not yet piped nor does it have a sewerage system. There's no electricity, although the building is wired for electric lights. Ruth's battery-fed radio is almost her only link with the world outside.

Fixing Food for Fifty a Big Job But Quantity Recipe Will Help Achieve That Home-Cooked Taste

COOKING for a crowd—a club or church group, for instance—is quite a job when you're not accustomed to it, or even if you are!

T. L. writes for main dish recipes to use at her club's last spring meeting and we've found a couple for her in the recently revised "Food for Fifty," a book by Sina Faye Fowler and Bessie Brooks West, published by John Wiley and Sons, Inc.

This volume is mainly for "use in food services and institutional cookery classes," but it's a good one to refer to when any large scale cooking is in the offing. Besides menus and recipes, it supplies all sorts of general information, such as the number of servings in various can sizes, approximate amounts of prepared foods needed to serve 50, and how to mix and bake breads in quantity. But to get back to T. L.'s question:

DEAR ANNE:

Can you suggest a main dish my committee might serve at our club's last luncheon of the season? Nothing too elaborate to make, please, but something that will taste good! Could you give several so we will have a choice?

T. L., Washington.

Here are two recipes, one featuring ham and one crab, both in amounts to serve 50 persons:

HAM AND MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

2 pounds mushrooms, fresh, sliced
2 ounces butter
8 pounds cooked ham, chopped or sliced
4 quarts white sauce (medium)
Buttered bread crumbs

Brown mushrooms in butter. Add ham. Place in casserole and fill with white sauce. Cover with crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in 350 degree oven.

DEVILED CRAB

12 6½-ounce cans crab meat, flaked, or 5 pounds fresh crab meat
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 ounce salt
2 teaspoons pepper
Few grains cayenne
5 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Mix all together, then add white sauce made of the following:

6 ouncer flour
1½ teaspoons prepared mustard

Mix sauce well with other ingredients, fill ramekins and cover with buttered bread crumbs. (About one quart will be needed.) Bake 15 minutes at 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

P. S. In case you're not using a scale, 2 ounces of butter or other table fat is ¼ cup; 6 ounces of flour is 1½ cups; 1 ounce salt is 1½ tablespoons.

DEAR ANNE:

I have an invitation to a very large wedding taking place in Baltimore on June 17. I want to attend the wedding and reception and, I am sorry to say, just don't know how to word my letter of acceptance. I know you will help me out on this. L. A. D., 1451 Park rd. nw.

The invitation you should accept is the one to the reception, since the invitation to the church does not require an answer. Phrase your reply formally and arrange the words in the same manner as an engraved invitation, somewhat as follows:

Miss Mary Wilson
accepts with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. George Hardin Lawrence's kind invitation for Saturday, the seventeenth of June

Use the first page of a sheet of note paper for this reply.

To J. S. S.: The preparation mentioned recently as an absorbent, deodorant filler for a cat box can be obtained from a local firm. The telephone number, Randolph 0433.

One on the Aisle—

The Palace Blends An Unusual Brew

By Richard L. Coe

"THE BIG HANGOVER," at the Palace, blends a cosmic vein and serious intent with happy results. This picture, very nicely performed by a cast headed by Van Johnson and Elizabeth Taylor, is on the different side and for those who are weary of the expected it will prove a diverting hour or so.

Johnson plays a war vet who was in the wine cellar of a French monastery when a bomb struck. He had to stand on his toes 24 hours to avoid drowning in aged brandy and since then he's been unable to so much as whiff alcohol without getting tipsy.

Because his best friend, who died in his arms on a flaming bomber, had planned to become a lawyer, Van takes over his pal's ambitions and winds up head of his class. This entitles him to clerkship in a plush firm. This he enters with the highest ideals, only to discover that it's being pretty sly about not protecting the rights of a Chinese doctor who's been locked out of his apartment because of his race.

These two aspects—the comical effects of alcohol and the serious aspect of discrimination—alternate in the camera's attention. One is amused by Johnson's groggily boisterous moments and one is impressed by Leon Ames, as a municipal attorney who points out that when the public complains about injustices in governmental administration, the public forgets that both financial and public rewards customarily go to the class top-rankers who, on graduation, are always bought by the most powerful law firms.

This is a serious charge, but the dinnertime speech wherein Ames delivers its gist is nicely handled. There is a quiet honesty of tone to the discussion and one also finds it natural to hear lawyers discussing their work at dinner instead of the fluffy conversation usually indulged in at movie dinner tables.

Chief credit for this off-the-beaten track picture goes to Norman Krasna, who wrote, produced and directed it, a combined assignment not generally meted out by Metro. One assumes that the outspoken production chief, Dore Schary, had something to do with this trust in Krasna.

The performances, too, are nicely molded. Miss Taylor, for instance, makes considerably more than a pallid ingenue out of her role and seems, by the way, far more adult than her 18 years. Johnson is both humorous and winning as the embryo public servant and the others play with marked finesse.

There's very little to complain about in this attempt to do something different by a studio whose successes are usually on more factory built themes.

"THE BIG HANGOVER," a Metro-Goldwyn Mayer release, produced by Norman Krasna, directed and written by Krasna. At the Palace.

HOWARD MITCHELL, the National Symphony conductor who'll be playing in the Celebrities Golf Tournament next weekend, already has his caddy . . . His 16-year-old son, Glen, who seems to take more pride in his dad's golf prowess than his musicianly standing, heard that dad would be playing with such as Bob Hope, Danny Kaye, Ben Hogan and Generals Vandenberg and McAuliffe the night of the Toscanini concert and quickly interrupted his father's thoughts on Toscanini to ask if he might caddy for him . . . Yes . . . The elder Mitchell was an Iowa golf champ when he was 18 and Glen shoots in the 80s himself.

DEMOCRATIC NOTE: On the way to the Toscanini concert the other evening, I caught a moment I'll never forget . . . There was a taxi jam around the hall and in the midst of all the stalled cabs and cars was a long black limousine, adrift in a motor sea, unable to move . . . Inside it were the President and Mrs. Truman . . . You felt sort of pleased that such can happen here . . . No, they weren't late, neither were we, just mutually congested.

"BRIGADOON," which begins its second week at the Gayety tonight, seems set for its screen future . . . 'Twill be filmed in Britain, with exteriors to be shot in the heather-covered hills of Scotland . . . J. Arthur Rank's outfit will handle the release . . . But that date's still far away.

MEMORIAL DAY means that the Warner Theaters which don't usually have matinee performances—the Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Home, Savoy, Seco, Takoma and York—will . . . It also means a special late showing tonight at the Dupont for that wonderful Charlie Chaplin revival "City Lights."

MEMORIAL DAY also will bring a special broadcast by the AVC over WCFM tomorrow night at 9:30 . . . "A Good Right Arm" titles this specially written script by Taft Feiman . . . The cast of eight will be all-AVCers.

TWO DOWNTOWN spots are handling seat sales for the new Collingwood Theater which opens tomorrow night with Gloria Jean in "Strictly Dishonorable." Mrs. Stabler's in Brentano's and the National Pipe Shop next to the National Theater.

Cathedral Amplifies 25 Voices

By Paul Hume

Paul Callaway's Chamber Chorus has sung in various smaller concert halls in Washington.

Yesterday afternoon they sang for the first time in Washington Cathedral. After hearing them in the Library of Congress, Phillips Gallery, Dumbarton Oaks, and Arts Club, it something of a revelation to hear what the cathedral's acoustics did for the 25 voices.

In Bach's motet, "Come, Jesus, Come," the chorus seemed amplified to several times its actual size. The tone of the chorus came to life in a thrilling way, and the motet took on shape and color as it has not in previous accounts.

The polyphonic writing was never obscured by the size of the church, as it sometimes is when larger choruses sing there. Added resonance and virility of tone was a valuable asset to the excellent chorus.

The same effect was even more apparent in Poulenc's Mass in G. The sometimes harsh dissonances of this music melted into a properly balanced series of perfectly devised settings of the text. Even the misplaced accents of the Gloria sounded more fluent in the correct surroundings.

The voices of the chorus have never sounded to better advantage than throughout the afternoon's singing. Florence Miller in the Agnus Dei, produced beauty of tone and sensitive mood in the taxing soprano solo.

Verdi's late choral setting of the Ave Maria was a haunting piece to divide Bach and Poulenc. Written in Verdi's eighty-fifth year, it comes after all the operas are over. Its harmonies are those of the free, chromatic writers but its lines stem from the Renaissance masters. It was a rare moment and one we hope to hear again soon.

COUNTRY OR CITY?

Do you desire your RAMBLER in a rural setting or in an exclusive suburban community? We are fortunate in having the answer to either question. Each has 3 bedrooms, each has a garage, each has, of course, a large living room with fireplace, one has 2 full baths, the other a bath and a half. One is situated on approximately ¾-acre, the other on approximately ½-acre. Each has its own special features to be found upon your personal inspection. We find it difficult to make a choice. What is yours?

Faith Is Power

That Night I Knew Stark Terror . . .

This is the first of six installments from the book, "Faith Is Power—For You" by Dr. Daniel A. Poling. In this installment, he tells how prayer was answered once but went unheeded another time.

By Daniel A. Poling

CHAPTER ONE

Prayer has been and is my soul's breath, as indispensible to my soul as oxygen is to my body.

Indeed there are times, stark moments, when the immediate life of the body may become dependent upon prayer rather than upon physical breath. Once when oxygen failed, prayer saved my body.

On the second of February, 1918, on the Western Front in France a gas alert was sounded on the Toul sector. I with a dozen other men was in a dugout Y.M.C.A. canteen which was an extension of an old French wine cellar.

DR. POLING

Behind the double gas curtains and in our English "Box Respirators" we stood for 90 minutes. It was our first experience of the kind. Coming within 24 hours after a major raid that had penetrated our lines deeply at that point, it found us tense and afraid.

We did not know what to expect; we could only wait . . .

"The hardest thing is just to wait This is the agonizing fate."

The sweat ran from my armpits and soon the desire to tear the mask from my face, to rush into the air outside, to breathe deeply, became all but irresistible. That night I knew terror, stark terror, as I had never known fear before.

I thought of home, remembered our children—and then I prayed. And by the faith that bends around the listening God I traveled home to peace and quiet.

The guns were silenced; the batteries of 77's directly behind us firing over us were far away; and in that humid, dark, and crowded room while the earth shook, I was alone. And yet not alone, because there was a Presence there that filled the place.

My lungs that had been screaming for oxygen were comforted. Whatever the answer of science—and I am sure science has an answer—breath from the soul saved the body that day.

Another Prayer

My first answer to prayer was affirmative, my second negative; and these two prayers were not far apart.

Late one August I was called to my parents' home by the desperate illness of a younger brother. When I saw him lying in mortal pain with the fatal grip of typhoid fever upon him, I knew what to do!

That night in a room separated from my brother's by a partition so thin that I could hear his sharp, staccato breathing, I knelt again to ask God to keep his promise that had never failed—the promise of that old wall motto, "There Hath Not Failed One Word Of All His Good Promise." With complete assurance I began that prayer.

But now it was different, altogether different. I got nowhere. There was no promise and no peace.

I seemed as one standing before a wall of stone, or a gate of brass that would not open. I became increasingly importunate. I argued and made demands.

Gradually a hopelessness came upon me. First it was amazement or the shock of disillusion, then anger, and finally despair.

I wanted the life of my brother more than I desired anything else in the world. I wanted his life so much that I was ready that night—ready and eager—to pledge my own life against his recovery. But there was no answer and not the slightest intimation that I had been heard.

Would it have been possible for me to batter through that closed door? Does the promise ask and it shall be given you strip down to just that?

There are some who so affirm.

I do not know and if I could, I would not assume the responsibility. If finally God does not give me the keys, I shall not take them by force. I want His answer. Always I may have mine without going to the trouble of praying.

Answer Was 'No.'

That night I left the house and tramped beside the little river, across the bridge and into the country. I was alone now as I had never before been alone—alone, helpless and without hope. But I would not concede defeat.

Tired to the bone, I came back to my room and to my knees. Now the breathing beyond that partition had changed; it galloped like a horse out of control. I could not pray, but I waited there and at last in utter weariness fell asleep.

Hours had passed since I first began to beat against that door that would not open, and the dawn had come when I opened my eyes. Before I was wide awake, I had my answer; and the answer was as definite as the other answer had been, but much more vivid and compelling.

The answer was "No."

That morning I found the interpretation of Christ's incredible promise: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do."

Until that morning I had never seen those three words in my name. I had read only: "Whatsoever ye shall ask, that will I do."

But in my name now means to me literally in my will. As I prayed for the recovery of my brother, there was no "thy will be done" anywhere in the wild and anguished cry of my heart. I was ready to settle for nothing less than "my will be done."

But with the answer that came after I could no longer cry out my passionate demand, came also the assurance that "No" was not only God's word to me but that it was also the answer I wanted.

It was as definite and final as that. Then I would not have exchanged the "No" for "Yes."

It was in that morning when he died that I came to know that he had something better than I had asked for him; that, as my father said later, "our loss is his gain."

I began to see even then that this life is the beginning and not the end. That it is, as another has said, "the childhood of our immortality."

Tomorrow: The first answer to a prayer.

New York, May 27 (AP).—The National Broadcasting Co. tonight said it has signed up Comedian Groucho Marx in an eight-year radio and television contract, effective next fall.

"It was a terrific fight, but I won," Groucho wisecracked after signing on the dotted line. Only a year ago he had succumbed to CBS lures and left the American Broadcasting Co.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A Very Busy Man

Kaye Is Rationed On Bob's Schedule

By Sonia Stein

"EITHER speak to Danny Kaye from 4:30 to 5 Saturday or we don't speak Saturday," said Bob Wolff. And he wasn't trying to sound big. Sportscaster Wolff is so boxed in by his schedule that he even has to make his phone calls on cue.

Wolff, who does sports shows for both WWDC and TV Station WTTG, is currently recording telephone interviews with celebrities who will be playing in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament next weekend. The interviews, to be aired on his 6 p.m. show on WWDC all this week, start off with Milton Berle tonight and will include Danny Kaye, with whom Wolff has a definite appointment today (nope, they didn't connect Saturday), and a number of the sports champions who'll be in the tournament.

Saturday he didn't quite fit one in but what he did fit in, between pills for a case of grippe he was staving off, was:

2 to 4:30 p.m. Description of the New York-Philadelphia game from wire reports which he fed to a small network of 15 stations although it was not heard locally.

5 to 5:15. Recording made at the ball park of a sports show to be played at 6 on WWDC.

5:20 to 5:30. Recording of a "pregame preview" to be used later that night on WWDC between the double-header.

6:05 to 6:20. Television sports show from the ball park for WTTG.

6:30 to 9. Play-by-play of the first game in the double-header, alternating with Arch McDonald on TV and radio.

9 to 9:15. Live sports show on WTTG. (This was fierce self-competition, since the show he recorded at 5:20 was then being played on WWDC.)

9:15 to 11:30. Second game of double-header, alternating mediums with McDonald.

11:30 to 11:45. Sports show for WTTG.

A Book, Too

WOLFF CHECKS his own schedule every day to see which of the 275 per year play-by-play sports events he's due to sandwich in between regular sports shows.

He's got to find time to do his weekly newspaper column, too, and to edit his baseball book, out this week.

Despite the full schedule, Wolff doesn't spread himself thin. He has a small, competent staff which checks statistics and rounds up information. "You can't kid the audience—it's full of experts, aged 9," he says. Wolff may assign Producer Joe Di Mona to find out whether it's illegal to insult the umpire (yes, in Brooklyn; no, in Manhattan; status undetermined in D. C.), while Howie Williams, who also spells Wolff and McDonald in the play-by-plays, collects batting averages.

A tremendously good organizer (whose baby son arrived between double-headers so papa could cover both games), Wolff started this complex life back at Duke University, where he led a band, sang at local night clubs and did a daily sports broadcast while making a reputation as an athlete and a scholar (Phi Beta Kappa, thank you). "You just have to concentrate. If you know you have to learn something in an hour's time, you do it, that's all," Wolff says.

Berle's Benefits

IN DEFERENCE to the afore-mentioned busy boy, I yielded to Wolff when his long distance call to Milton Berle came through on one phone just when Mr. TV and I were having a chat about his golf on another. Resuming later, I found out that Berle plays golf "in the lower Hades." But whether it's golf or mixed doubles with the Australian boomerang, he'd do it for a charitable cause.

Berle plays hundreds of benefits each year, and he started doing them at the age of 6.

Since the all-night stint he put in a short time ago for the cancer fund, Berle's played four other benefits, including one last Monday at Madison Square Garden to raise funds for the Milton Berle Fund in Aid of Crippled Children.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Hogan Takes the Game Seriously

This year's National Celebrities Golf Tournament (ticket details on the sports page) includes one entry whose name makes the show an absolute "must" for me.

That's little Ben Hogan, the man who almost lost his life in an auto smashup and then came roaring through with a sensational comeback fashioned out of sheer grit and determination.

Ben's perseverance is legendary. Even before his accident, it was not unusual for him to play 36 holes of championship golf and then, dissatisfied with a sub-par round, go out to the practice tee for several hours of methodical work.

One story has it that, on the last day of the PGA, Ben came down to the lobby of his hotel with a fierce scowl on his face.

"What's eating you?" asked a friend.

"What's eating me?" snapped Hogan, "I've been three-putting the carpet in my room all morning."

"Three black kittens, two striped." (Lockwood 5-8455.)

"Three cuddly 2-month-old kittens." (Shepherd 1971.)

"Cute male wire-haired terrier." (Emerson 1044.)

OLD, OLD STORY

Last week I got one of those little cards notifying me that it was time to take my car to a testing station for its annual inspection. So off I went.

A triple line of waiting cars extended out to the curb. From there, a single line went back to the corner, down the block, and around the next corner.

"In the afternoon they won't be so busy," I told myself as I drove off. And I was right. That afternoon the line was only one block long.

My left headlight was too high, and I had to get it fixed and come back again. Same thing. Another long line.

The inspectors are efficient, and work rapidly. It's obvious that they know their business. But most of the time they just can't keep pace with the volume of work.

The reason is an old, old story to District Liners. Money —Congress — appropriations —budgets.

Traffic Director Keneipp explains that it takes a team of six men to operate each lane. Technically, he has exactly the right number of employes to man all available lanes.

"But," he points out, "that's without allowing for sick leave and annual leave. Working through the winter in drafty surroundings that must be a haven for colds, these fellows average only seven days of sick leave each year. But add 26 days of annual leave and you'll know why we're always short at least one full crew.

"I asked for more personnel in this budget, and the Commissioners okayed a part of my request. Eventually, I hope we can have enough inspectors to keep delays to a minimum."

"Have you ever been asked to keep the testing stations open evenings, or Saturdays, for the benefit of those who must lay off from work to meet your present hours?" I asked.

"If we were open on Saturday, you'd have an even bigger jam than now exists," Keneipp said. "I'm afraid paractically everybody would want to come on Saturday. As for evenings, we were open until about 8 or 9 o'clock when we first started these stations, but very few people came in during those hours, so we eliminated the night shift and put all our men on daytime work."

Incidentally, Keneipp gave orders some time ago that minor "nuisance" deficiencies should not be used as a basis for rejecting a car. Only defects which actually affect safe driving result in a red sticker.

"In that way," says the traffic director, "we've cut our percentage of rejects on the first visit to just under 50 percent. Compared to other jurisdictions, it's a good record."

Maybe so. But looking at it the other way, it's a bit frightening to realize that half the cars on our streets need repair work before they can be considered "safe."

PARADISE LOST

The first time I saw it my senses were rent . . . My reason was almost unseated . . . But oh, how I miss it, my fender's first dent . . . For now it's accordion-pleated.

SOUTH AMERICA, TAKE IT AWAY

Sam LeBow of 3220 Wisconsin ave. nw. tells the story of the fellow who was trying out some newly acquired dance steps the other night, with highly unsatisfactory results.

"Say, honey," he called to his wife in the other room, "what are you doing in there?"

"I'm under the sun lamp, trying to get a tan," she replied. Her old man came back with:

"Well, let your tango and come in here and help me rumba."

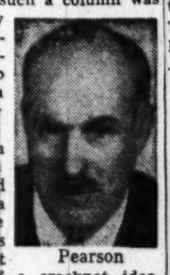
Thoughts for the Year 2000

By Drew Pearson

This column is to be buried at Wichita, Kans., to be dug up and read 50 years later.

The idea of such a column was evolved by Dick Long, editor of the Wichita Eagle who is burying a mid-century time cylinder at the Wichita airport. When he first asked me to write a column to be read 50 years later, I thought it was sort of a crackpot idea. But the more I thought about it, the more I figured this might be a chance to get some things off my chest I've been thinking for some time. So here goes.



Pearson

To those who read this in the year 2000:

This is written in 1950, when the world seems very complex, very harassed and very uncertain. I don't know how much more complex it will be by the time you read this. But approximately 100 years ago, when my grandfather traveled to Kansas in a prairie schooner, life was much simpler. He pitched a tent at night almost any place he wished. There were no fences to bother him, no no-trespassing signs, no speed laws, no filling stations, no gasoline fumes.

In the hundred years that have passed since then, we have accelerated in complexities of life tremendously. And in the 50 years since my mother used to take me to Kansas as a boy, they have become accelerated even faster. I vividly recall always seeing Indians in the Union Station when we changed trains at Kansas City, and that my cousin, who owned one of the first automobiles in Ottawa, Kans., didn't have to worry about getting a license tag nor about parking problems.

Today, in contrast, you can hardly get your car against the curb in downtown Ottawa, while the airports even have to worry about parking or "stacking" airplanes overhead.

During the past 10 years the complications of life have accelerated faster than during the preceding hundred. Especially in the past 10 years we have accelerated the mechanics of human destruction.

In fact, I would say this was the most distinctive feature of our current decade, and that we are now at a turning point where man must learn to live with himself or else bring about his own destruction.

For we have now evolved not only an atomic bomb which can burn whole cities in a matter of minutes, but a hydrogen bomb which could smash the entire planet to pieces.

We have developed gases which make raving maniacs out of men, developing their lust to kill. We have devised germs which can be scattered over an enemy country in thousands of tubes, spreading disease among cattle, rust among wheat, and virus among humans.

We have invented rockets which, when fired into the air, shoot not in a straight line, but change their course with uncanny accuracy to catch up with a speeding airplane. And we have developed bombs which can devastate cities almost across oceans.

All this we have developed quite recently for we are now convulsed with fear.

The Age of Fear

I should say that as you in the year 2000 look back on the year 1950 you will probably describe it as the age of fear. And you will probably also say that fear is a bad master.

It was in 1950 that we really woke up from our sublime isolation. Most of us alive today recall how the Senate killed Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations because they believed we could remain isolated. We recall how at the London Naval Conference of 1930 the isolationists would not even let Henry L. Stimson sign an agreement to "consult" before a war broke.

Or as late as 1946, our delegates writing the United Nations Charter at San Francisco insisted on the right of "veto."

But time has moved so swiftly, the weapons of war have developed so gruesomely that, in the five short years between 1945 and 1950, most of us regret that last remaining vestige of isolation—the veto.

Yes, this is the age of fear—and fear is a bad master. It is an age when we spend our time looking under the bed for spies instead of looking ahead; when politicians fulminate about past mistakes instead of striving to prevent future mistakes.

This is an age when we concentrate on things military until there is real worry we may go bankrupt, though the state of the world is fear, and fear is psychological—for which military might can bring no permanent cure.

If we could remove fear from the minds of men, our problems would be over. If we could especially remove the fear that has been carefully nurtured in the minds of the Russian people—fear against us which their Moscow masters want them to have—then our own fear would also vanish. So also would vanish our need for back-breaking armament.

Fashions from The Hecht Co. Sound a Smart Note at National Symphony Orchestra Meeting

Members of the Advance Ticket Sale Committee meet at the home of Mrs. Theodore W. Dominick, 1515 31st St. N.W. Program under discussion: how to intensify greater public interest in The National Symphony's 1950 winter series. Left to right: Mrs. Richard Burke, Chairman, Newcomers' Committee; Mrs. A. Lloyd Symington, Chairman, Telephone Committee; Mrs. M. Quinn Shaughnessy, Chairman, Colleges and Universities Committee; Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers).

A pretty girl is like a melody, and pretty clothes just make her prettier! Washington's popular Virginia Baker proved it at a recent committee meeting of The National Symphony Orchestra, when compliments sang over her pretty summer dress. A lyrically lovely, pure silk organza at 17.95, the vivacious Virginia had chosen it at The Hecht Co., so the plaudits were music to her ears. Like so many on-the-go Washingtonians, she finds The Hecht Co.'s Fashion Floors a haven of flattering costumes for important social events. Now, with Summer's crowded calendar ahead, she looks to this great store in the Nation's Capital for fashions in tune with them all.

WITH opening date planned for October 25th, 1950, and closing, April 4th, 1951, ticket sale plans for the National Symphony Orchestra are discussed by the quartette at left. They are (left to right) Mrs. M. Quinn Shaughnessy, Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers), Mrs. Bourbon A. Dawes and Mrs. Richard Burke.
